

The Moon Rules the Seventh House

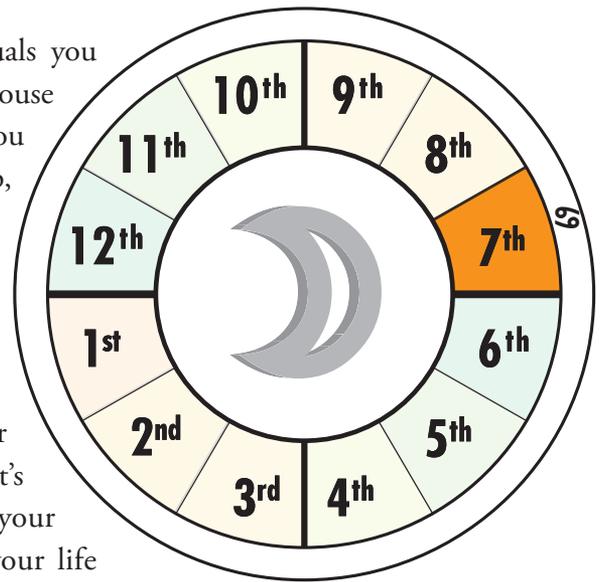

The Seventh House contains the individuals you relate to. It may appear that the Seventh House involves other people, but in fact, when you engage with the Seventh House through relationship, what you're looking at is a mirror. Your partners in relationship reflect your own issues back to you.

The Seventh House is your partner and your adversary.

The Seventh House is your partner, and also your adversary. But the first thing to remember is that it's the planet that rules the Seventh House that is your actual partner and adversary. The individuals in your life who take on the role of your partner or your adversary play those roles because you are projecting the ruler of your Seventh House on them, and they are reflecting that planet — and its needs and lessons — back to you. You engage with the planet that rules your Seventh House through your one-to-one relationships. But it's always about the planet and never about the person who appears to embody the planet for you.

Your partner is like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. Your partner wants to support you so that you can be happy. Of course, you have two shoulders, and your adversary sits on the other one. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on whether or not you are in right relationship with the planet that rules your Seventh House. The goal is not to heed your partner and ignore your adversary (which is a good thing, because often it's hard to tell them apart). The goal is to make sure that both your partner and your adversary support you effectively. If your adversary creates needless difficulties for you and your partner doesn't engage fully, you won't experience much happiness.

You can engage with your partner and your adversary through your one-to-one relationships. Remember that no matter what the issue appears to be in a relationship, if that person is playing the role of your partner or your adversary, it's really about the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House. When you move into right relationship with that planet and begin to meet those needs, the quality of your one-to-one relationships will improve.

The Seventh House is other people.

Other people do not live inside you. However, other people do function as mirrors that reflect the ruler of your Seventh House back to you. Until you recognize that other people are mirrors, they will appear to embody the needs and qualities of the planet that rules your Seventh House. You project your unresolved issues, judgments, and expectations of the ruler of your Seventh House on other people, and for a while at least, you can pretend that those issues belong to other people and not to you. Eventually, you need to accept the truth that everything you see in other people, including all of the qualities you judge or disapprove of, lives inside you. This can be a lot more fun than it sounds.

When you walk past an actual mirror, you usually take a moment and check your reflection. You want to be certain that you look your best and that (both metaphorically and literally) you don't have spinach in your teeth. What if you did the same thing with other people? When you notice something about someone else's appearance, view it as if you just caught a glimpse of your own reflection. It's probably a distorted reflection, and what you see (and judge) in other people may not be nearly as pronounced in you, but it still exists in you somewhere, and if you notice it in other people, it means that you need to give it some conscious attention in yourself. And if you're wondering what to look for, just remember that it will always have to do with the needs or expression of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

The Moon Rules the Seventh House

Your subjective safety needs are your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your subjective safety needs.

Safety is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, safety is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you embody safety. When you maintain the minimum required balance in your Safety Need Account, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when the balance in your Safety Need Account falls below the minimum level and you begin to experience your reality from First Kingdom/Victim Consciousness, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you don't feel safe, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you will no longer have to worry about protecting yourself to survive.

You are always objectively safe because your authentic Self is invulnerable, but until you remember this truth, you will look for protection from anything unfamiliar because it could be a threat to your survival. When something makes a deposit in your Safety Need Account, you create an attachment to it, expecting that you can always rely on it as a source of safety. The paradox of attachments is that they drain the balance in your Safety Need Account, but the less safe you feel, the stronger the attachment becomes. You must use the Present Moment Awareness Safety Meditation to reconnect with the truth that right here, right now, in this moment, you are completely safe. Then you can let go of the attachment by stating the truth that it is not your source and you can survive without it. You are the most vulnerable to creating attachments around your partner and your adversary. You rely on the individuals who play the roles of your partner and your adversary to make deposits in your Safety Need Account, and you fear that without the help of these individuals, you would not be able to meet your subjective safety needs.

You can become conscious of your attachments and learn how to monitor the balance in your Safety Need Account by engaging with your partner and your adversary. You will do this by engaging in the one-to-one relationships you have with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses safety to support and encourage you by making deposits in your Safety Need Account. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses safety to challenge you, possibly by making withdrawals from your Safety Need Account. Use these relationships as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with your subjective safety needs. Both your partner and your adversary are helping you to connect to the truth that regardless of external appearances, when you connect to the present moment, you are always safe. The more you manage your subjective safety needs and know the truth of your safety, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody safety to you? How does this person meet your subjective safety needs?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody safety to you? How does this person challenge you to meet your subjective safety needs?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how safety is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how safety is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What are some things about your partner and your adversary that matter the most to you? How do you feel when something disrupts your relationships with your partner or your adversary?

What is it about your partner and your adversary that you believe can't live without? Do you actually need that to survive? Why or why not?

Your subjective safety needs are other people; other people are your subjective safety needs.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of safety to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of safety on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to safety and how well you are meeting your subjective safety needs. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you maintain the minimum required balance in your Safety Need Account, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when the balance in your Safety Need Account falls below the minimum level and you begin to experience your reality from First Kingdom/Victim Consciousness, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you will no longer have to worry about protecting yourself to survive.

You are always objectively safe because your authentic Self is invulnerable, but until you remember this truth, you will look for protection from anything unfamiliar because it could be a threat to your survival. When something makes a deposit in your Safety Need Account, you create an attachment to it, expecting that you can always rely on it as a source of safety. The paradox of attachments is that they drain the balance in your Safety Need Account, but the less safe you feel, the stronger the attachment becomes. You must use the Present Moment Awareness Safety Meditation to reconnect with the truth that right here, right now, in this moment, you are completely safe. Then you can let go of the attachment by stating the truth that it is not your source and you can survive without it. You are the most vulnerable to creating attachments around other people. You need a certain amount of interaction with other people to feel safe. Even if you are largely introverted and prefer to keep your own company most of the time, you can't function in absolute isolation. Sometimes you just need to be surrounded by people to feel safe.

You can become conscious of your attachments and learn how to monitor the balance in your Safety Need Account by engaging with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve how well they are managing their subjective safety needs. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about safety live in you somewhere. When you notice that other people appear frightened, stressed, anxious, or even just uncomfortable, it's an indication that you are not maintaining the minimum balance in your Safety Need Account. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with mastering your subjective safety needs. The more you manage your subjective safety needs and know the truth of your safety, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people meet their subjective safety needs? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of safety reflect your own experience of safety? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how you notice safety in other people?

What are the biggest problems with safety that you see in other people? Do you see where you have those problems with safety in your life?

What are some things about other people that matter the most to you? How do you feel when something disrupts your perceptions of other people?

What is it about other people that you believe can't live without? Do you actually need that to survive? Why or why not?

Your Emotional Guidance System is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your Emotional Guidance System.

Your Emotional Guidance System is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, your Emotional Guidance System is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you feel your feelings. When you allow yourself to experience the full range of emotions without interference or resistance, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when you pursue only pleasurable feelings and avoid or suppress anything that feels uncomfortable, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you avoid feeling your feelings, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you won't suffer through negative, uncomfortable, or unpleasant feelings.

Feelings are just feelings: they can't hurt you because your authentic Self is invulnerable. But until you remember this truth, you try to avoid anything unpleasant or painful because you view those experiences as threatening. You believe negative feelings are caused by conditions in the outside world, but in fact, the conditions are the effect of your feelings. Feelings are how your Emotional Guidance System helps you to identify your current level of consciousness. This is important, because everything you experience is a match to that vibration. An unpleasant feeling warns you that you are tuned to a low vibration of consciousness. You can choose a better-feeling thought and tune to a higher level of consciousness, which will then create a new set of conditions. You are the most sensitive to negativity—and the most likely to turn down the volume on your Emotional Guidance System rather than change the frequency—with your partner and your adversary. Other people's pain and negativity makes you extremely uncomfortable. You don't know how to handle it, and until you learn, you may ignore or dismiss it. You think you're turning down the volume on other people's feelings, but the truth is that other people are making you conscious of your own pain and negativity, and that's what you're avoiding.

You can learn how to navigate using your Emotional Guidance System by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses their feelings and emotions to support and encourage you. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses their feelings and emotions to challenge you. Remember that the feelings and emotions that you notice in your partner and your adversary are your own. It's easier for you to become conscious of what you're feeling by noticing it in other individuals. Use these relationships as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with your own feelings and emotions, and when you notice your partner or your adversary expressing an unpleasant feeling, use your own Emotional Guidance System to choose a better-feeling thought. The more you are willing to feel your feelings and listen to your Emotional Guidance System, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody feelings and emotions?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody feelings and emotions?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how your Emotional Guidance System is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how your Emotional Guidance System is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What feelings do you usually experience with your partner and your adversary? When do you experience these feelings?

What feelings do you tend to avoid with your partner and your adversary? When do you experience these feelings?

On a scale of 1 to 10, with 10 being the most intense, how much do you feel your feelings with your partner and your adversary? What would happen if you turned up the volume on your feelings?

Your Emotional Guidance System is other people; other people are your Emotional Guidance System.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of feelings and emotions to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of feelings and emotions on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to your Emotional Guidance System and how well you are feeling your feelings. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you allow yourself to experience the full range of emotions without interference or resistance, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when you pursue only pleasurable feelings and avoid or suppress anything that feels uncomfortable, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you won't suffer through negative, uncomfortable, or unpleasant feelings.

Feelings are just feelings: they can't hurt you because your authentic Self is invulnerable. But until you remember this truth, you try to avoid anything unpleasant or painful because you view those experiences as threatening. You believe negative feelings are caused by conditions in the outside world, but in fact, the conditions are the effect of your feelings. Feelings are how your Emotional Guidance System helps you to identify your current level of consciousness. This is important, because everything you experience is a match to that vibration. An unpleasant feeling warns you that you are tuned to a low vibration of consciousness. You can choose a better-feeling thought and tune to a higher level of consciousness, which will then create a new set of conditions. You are the most sensitive to negativity—and the most likely to turn down the volume on your Emotional Guidance System rather than change the frequency—with other people. You constantly pick up emotional signals from other people and are instinctively aware of what other people are feeling. At times, this emotional noise can become too intense to handle, so you learn to ignore it. But the feelings that you are ignoring don't belong to other people; they belong to you.

You can learn how to navigate using your Emotional Guidance System by engaging with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve their feelings and emotions. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about their feelings and emotions live in you somewhere. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. Other people give you feedback on what you are feeling at any given moment. You need this feedback because you are not necessarily conscious of your feelings, and you must learn to listen to them. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with mastering your feelings and emotions. When you become conscious of what you're feeling, you can make use of your Emotional Guidance System and navigate towards better-feeling thoughts. The more you are willing to feel your feelings and listen to your Emotional Guidance System, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express feelings and emotions in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of feelings and emotions reflect your own experience of feelings and emotions? What do you think other people are feeling most of the time? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how you notice feelings and emotions in other people?

Generally, how well do other people feel their feelings?

What are the biggest problems with feelings and emotions that you see in other people? Do you see where you have those problems with feelings and emotions in your life?

What feelings do you usually experience with other people? When do you experience these feelings?

What feelings do you tend to avoid with other people? When do you experience these feelings?

On a scale of 1 to 10, with 10 being the most intense, how much do you feel your feelings with other people? What would happen if you turned up the volume on your feelings?

The Moon, the Ruler of your Seventh House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Seventh House shows where you most rely on other people in your life and where you are most likely to give away your power to other individuals. Your partners in relationship have more access to the resources of this house than they should. These resources are vital to healthy partnerships and relationships, but you must be fully responsible for them because they're your resources, not your partners'.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video on the Moon that explores the house that the Moon, the Ruler of your Seventh House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by the Moon, the Ruler of your Seventh House. Now revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience the Moon as the ruler of your Seventh House, and notice how the house the Moon occupies influences your understanding.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the First House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your First House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to manage your subjective safety needs, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to experience your feelings and emotions, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to fix the problems you see in other people, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Second House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Second House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to manage your subjective safety needs. You will spend money and use your talents to experience your feelings and emotions. You will spend money and use your talents to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will spend money and use your talents to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Third House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Third House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to manage your subjective safety needs, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to experience your feelings and emotions, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fourth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fourth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you manage your subjective safety needs, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you experience your feelings and emotions, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you fix the problems you see in other people, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fifth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fifth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to manage your subjective safety needs, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to experience your feelings and emotions, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to fix the problems you see in other people, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Sixth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Sixth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to manage your subjective safety needs, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to experience your feelings and emotions, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Seventh House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Seventh House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to manage your subjective safety needs for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to experience your feelings and emotions for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to fix the problems you see in other people for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Eighth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eighth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to manage your subjective safety needs. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to experience your feelings and emotions. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Ninth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Ninth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to manage your subjective safety needs because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to experience your feelings and emotions because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to fix the problems you see in other people because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Tenth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Tenth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to manage your subjective safety needs, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to experience your feelings and emotions, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to fix the problems you see in other people, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Eleventh House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to manage your subjective safety needs so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to experience your feelings and emotions so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to fix the problems you see in other people so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Twelfth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your partner and your adversary, and other people. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to manage your subjective safety needs, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to experience your feelings and emotions, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to fix the problems you see in other people, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.