

The Moon Rules the Eighth House

The Eighth House is a house of loss. The loss is usually financial, and the most practical expressions of the Eighth House involve debt and other financial obligations. The money you make through the Eighth House comes from legacies and inheritances, so even these financial gains are the result of loss (i.e., death). The Eighth House is the house of your partner's money and resources. Where the Second House is "mine" and the Seventh House is "yours," the Eighth House is "ours."

The Eighth House is your debt.

If you're like most people, when you hear the word "debt" you immediately assume two things: it involves money and it's bad. Neither of those things is universally true, and adjusting your definition of debt and your judgments about it is an important step towards experiencing prosperity. Whatever the external expressions of debt may be, your actual debt is the planet that rules your Eighth House. The needs and expression of that planet are the Universal Puzzle Piece that connects to your personal experience of debt. You owe the expression of that planet to others. Meeting the needs of that planet carries an extra level of obligation for you. But remember that debt flows in two directions. Just as you owe the expression of the ruler of your Eighth House to others, other people also owe it to you. The most important lesson about debt is that it's an expression of the Law of Circulation. You both give and receive support.

And that's another important thing to remember about debt: it's evidence of support. When you owe someone, it means that they provided you with help and support when you needed it. Other people owe you because you provided them with help and support, and they will repay that support at some point in the future. The most appropriate attitude towards debt is gratitude.

That being said, the financial expression of debt is an important consideration. Debt is part of a bigger picture of your prosperity. It's important to be conscious of your financial obligations and the money you owe (as well as the money owed to you). It's an odd concept, but in the world of finance, debt can be viewed as an asset. Personal financial debt often feels like a burden, however, and it's important to manage it consciously. This becomes easier when you remember that even your credit card balances and your student loan debt are really about your relationship to the needs and expression of the planet that rules your Eighth House. When you manage the needs of that planet, you manage your debt.

The Eighth House is your shared resources.

You are responsible for your Eighth House, but you're not exclusively responsible for it. The Eighth House is like a joint bank account. You can make deposits and withdrawals from the account, but so can other people. You're still responsible for maintaining the minimum balance in the account, but you don't have full or complete control over it. The planet that rules your Eighth House is your shared resources, and the needs and expressions of that planet are joint bank accounts. On the plus side, other people can make deposits in those accounts, which means you often have more resources available to you than you expect, and meeting the needs of that planet is easy. But the down side is that other people can also make withdrawals from that account, which means there may be less available to you when you need it the most. The bottom line is that everything associated with the Eighth House—and the needs of the planet that rules the Eighth House—is a collaboration. To some degree, you will need to pool your resources and coordinate with other people to accomplish your Eighth House goals.

In the external world, managing shared resources, such as joint checking accounts, shared food and supplies, or communal living spaces, has its own set of challenges. It's easier and more harmonious when everyone agrees on the rules and boundaries up front, so everyone contributes equally and shares in both the responsibilities and the rewards. This is not quite as easy in your internal world because other people don't actually agree to pool their resources to help you meet the needs of the ruler of your Eighth House. You can't hold them accountable for doing their part because it's not really their business in the first place. You can, however, limit access to your joint bank accounts. If someone isn't making regular deposits in your account, you can block their access.

The Moon Rules the Eighth House

Your subjective safety needs are your debt; your debt is your subjective safety needs.

Safety is your debt. It's what you owe, and it's what other people owe you. Remember that debt is evidence of support. When you owe someone, it means that they provided you with help and support when you needed it, and others owe you for the help and support you gave them. When you maintain the minimum required balance in your Safety Need Account, you inspire and support other people, and you actively engage with the Law of Circulation. You both give and receive support, and this creates prosperity for you. But when the balance in your Safety Need Account falls below the minimum level and you begin to experience your reality from First Kingdom/Victim Consciousness, debt feels like a burden. You worry about your ability to repay your debts, and you are reluctant to accept support when you need it because that would mean taking on more debt, all of which limits your ability to meet your subjective safety needs. On a personal level, when the balance in your Safety Need Account falls below the minimum level and you begin to experience your reality from First Kingdom/Victim Consciousness, you become overly concerned about your financial obligations. You focus on lack, and on what you owe, and this disrupts the flow of circulation and limits your prosperity. You want to be free of all debt, because you believe this will make you independent and prosperous, and when that happens, you will no longer have to worry about protecting yourself to survive.

You are always objectively safe because your authentic Self is invulnerable, but until you remember this truth, you will look for protection from anything unfamiliar because it could be a threat to your survival. When something makes a deposit in your Safety Need Account, you create an attachment to it, expecting that you can always rely on it as a source of safety. The paradox of attachments is that they drain the balance in your Safety Need Account, but the less safe you feel, the stronger the attachment becomes. You must use the Present Moment Awareness Safety Meditation to reconnect with the truth that right here, right now, in this moment, you are completely safe. Then you can let go of the attachment by stating the truth that it is not your source and you can survive without it. You are the most vulnerable to creating attachments around your debt. One way this can show up is that you have a familiar level of debt and obligation that you strive to maintain (possibly unconsciously). This means that however much you believe you would like to be free of all debt, financial or otherwise, repaying all of your debts is as frightening and uncomfortable to you as taking on more debt is. When you repay one debt, you almost immediately take on a new debt to replace it.

You can become conscious of your attachments and learn how to monitor the balance in your Safety Need Account by engaging with your debt. Rather than considering your financial debts, look for an example of a debt you owe that relates to safety. Anything that feels like an obligation you have, or a promise that you have made will do, because keeping that promise and living up to that expectation is really about meeting your subjective safety needs. First, consider how you created that debt. Remember the support that you received, acknowledge how much it helped you at the time by making a deposit in your Safety Need Account, and take a few moments to experience gratitude for that support. Next, become conscious of how you expect to repay that debt. You don't necessarily have to pay back the person who provided the support. When it comes to debts of safety, you can often pay them forward by embodying safety yourself and helping others with it when they are in need. You can make deposits in other people's Safety Need Accounts to repay your debts of safety. The more you manage your subjective safety needs and know the truth of your safety, the more you will engage with the Law of Circulation and experience prosperity.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your debt resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your debt resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you owe a debt of safety? To whom do you owe that debt? What support did you receive to create that debt?

What are some examples of how someone else owes you a debt of safety? What support did you give to create that debt? How and when do you expect to collect it?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

Where and how do you receive support with your subjective safety needs when you need it?

What are some things about debt that matter the most to you? How do you feel when something disrupts your debt?

What is it about your debt that you believe can't live without? Do you actually need that to survive? Why or why not?

Your subjective safety needs are your shared resources; your shared resources are your subjective safety needs.

Because safety is a shared resource, your Safety Need Account is a joint bank account. You are personally responsible for it, but you're not exclusively responsible for it. You look for support and collaboration when you meet your safety needs, because when you pool your resources, you can accomplish far more than you can on your own. When you maintain the minimum required balance in your Safety Need Account, these partnerships work out beautifully. Everyone contributes to your Safety Need Account, so it's always there when you need it, and it never runs out. Whenever you need help or support, someone is always there to pick up the slack, and you do the same for them. But when the balance in your Safety Need Account falls below the minimum level and you begin to experience your reality from First Kingdom/Victim Consciousness, other people don't contribute equally, and your Safety Need Account is often overdrawn. You may do your part to make deposits and maintain your resources, but other people's withdrawals drain the account and leave you feeling unsupported and used. On a personal level, when you don't feel safe, these inequalities will play out in your relationships and with your actual shared resources, such as joint bank accounts, communal food, office supplies, and shared spaces. It may feel like you're doing all the work and you're cleaning up other people's messes. As hard as it can be, you must find the line that marks the boundary of My Business, and stay on your side of it. You pool your resources with others because you want the support of a community. You believe that when you have a communal safety net, you will no longer have to worry about protecting yourself to survive.

You are always objectively safe because your authentic Self is invulnerable, but until you remember this truth, you will look for protection from anything unfamiliar because it could be a threat to your survival. When something makes a deposit in your Safety Need Account, you create an attachment to it, expecting that you can always rely on it as a source of safety. The paradox of attachments is that they drain the balance in your Safety Need Account, but the less safe you feel, the stronger the attachment becomes. You must use the Present Moment Awareness Safety Meditation to reconnect with the truth that right here, right now, in this moment, you are completely safe. Then you can let go of the attachment by stating the truth that it is not your source and you can survive without it. You are the most vulnerable to creating attachments around your shared resources. Shared resources are challenging because only a portion of those resources fall within the limits of My Business. You expect that pooling your resources will provide a greater level of safety, but when you create an attachment to your shared resources it drains your Safety Need Account because your safety now depends on other people making sufficient contributions to the pool.

You can become conscious of your attachments and learn how to monitor the balance in your Safety Need Account by engaging with your shared resources. Begin by identifying your shared resources. These include every situation where you collaborate with others or pool your resources so that you get a smaller slice of a larger pie. Consider that when you engage with those shared resources, what you're really sharing is safety. And if you can't think of any external shared resources, just consider how you collaborate and share safety directly—for example, where being a part of a community provides greater support and protection to everyone. Evaluate whether you are pulling your own weight in this endeavor. If you don't feel supported and you don't see the advantages of the collaboration, it may be a sign that you aren't contributing enough. It could also be a sign that you aren't claiming the support that's available to you. Explore your relationship to your shared resources and find the correct point of balance with how you give and receive safety. The more you manage your subjective safety needs and know the truth of your safety, the more you will benefit from pooling your resources.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your shared resources resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your subjective safety needs and your shared resources resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you pool your resources of safety with other people? How do you contribute to that collective? What benefits do you receive in return?

Who has access to the bank account of your subjective safety needs? Do they make more contributions to the balance or withdrawals? Does this arrangement work for you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What expectations do you have about everyone's role with safety? Do you meet those expectations? Do other people meet them?

Where are the limits of My Business with your subjective safety needs? What is the limit of how much you can make up for other people's shortfalls? What is the limit of how much you can expect other people to make up for your shortfalls?

What are some things about your shared resources that matter the most to you? How do you feel when something disrupts your shared resources?

What is it about your shared resources that you believe can't live without? Do you actually need that to survive? Why or why not?

Your Emotional Guidance System is your debt; your debt is your Emotional Guidance System.

Feelings and emotions are your debt. They're what you owe, and they're what other people owe you. Remember that debt is evidence of support. When you owe someone, it means that they provided you with help and support when you needed it, and others owe you for the help and support you gave them. When you allow yourself to experience the full range of emotions without interference or resistance, you inspire and support other people, and you actively engage with the Law of Circulation. You both give and receive support, and this creates prosperity for you. But when you pursue only pleasurable feelings and avoid or suppress anything that feels uncomfortable, debt feels like a burden. You worry about your ability to repay your debts, and you are reluctant to accept support when you need it because that would mean taking on more debt, all of which limits your ability to feel your feelings and navigate using your Emotional Guidance System. On a personal level, when you avoid feeling your feelings, you become overly concerned about your financial obligations. You focus on lack, and on what you owe, and this disrupts the flow of circulation and limits your prosperity. You want to be free of all debt, because you believe this will make you independent and prosperous, and when that happens, you won't suffer through negative, uncomfortable, or unpleasant feelings.

Feelings are just feelings: they can't hurt you because your authentic Self is invulnerable. But until you remember this truth, you try to avoid anything unpleasant or painful because you view those experiences as threatening. You believe negative feelings are caused by conditions in the outside world, but in fact, the conditions are the effect of your feelings. Feelings are how your Emotional Guidance System helps you to identify your current level of consciousness. This is important, because everything you experience is a match to that vibration. An unpleasant feeling warns you that you are tuned to a low vibration of consciousness. You can choose a better-feeling thought and tune to a higher level of consciousness, which will then create a new set of conditions. You are the most sensitive to negativity—and the most likely to turn down the volume on your Emotional Guidance System rather than change the frequency—with your debt. In addition to the emotions and feelings you experience in relationship to debt, you owe a debt of your feelings, both to yourself and to others. When other people feel their feelings around you and share their authentic emotions, it obligates you to do the same. And you may attempt to avoid taking on this debt by not recognizing or witnessing other people's feelings, especially their negative or painful feelings.

You can learn how to navigate using your Emotional Guidance System by engaging with your debt. Rather than considering your financial debts, look for an example of a debt you owe that relates to your feelings and emotions. Think of situations where you had to be present with someone else who was expressing his or her feelings or emotions and asking you to witness them, or situations where someone else was there for you while you felt your own feelings. Now consider the nature of the debt that was created with that encounter. What do you owe that person with regards to your feelings and emotions, and what do they owe you? Take a moment and acknowledge the support that you received and experience gratitude for being able to share authentic feelings and emotions. Now recognize that you do not have to repay that debt in kind. Just because you shared or witnessed negative or painful feelings doesn't mean that you are obligated to repay that with another experience of negative or painful feelings. And when you repay the debt, you don't have to match the level of intensity of the original experience. You repay the debt by being willing to feel your own feelings and emotions, and by being willing to be present when other people feel their feelings and emotions. The more you are willing to feel your feelings and listen to your Emotional Guidance System, the more you will engage with the Law of Circulation and experience prosperity.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your debt resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your debt resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you owe a debt of your feelings and emotions, perhaps because they were open and vulnerable in front of you, and now you feel obligated to be vulnerable in front of them? To whom do you owe that debt? What support did you receive to create that debt?

What are some examples of how someone else owes you a debt of feelings and emotions, perhaps because you were present and supported them through an emotional crisis and now you expect them to provide emotional support for you when you need it? What support did you give to create that debt? How and when do you expect to collect it?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

Where and how do you receive support with your Emotional Guidance System when you need it?

What feelings do you usually experience with debt? When do you experience them?

What feelings do you tend to avoid with debt? When do you experience these feelings?

On a scale of 1 to 10, with 10 being the most intense, how much do you feel your feelings with debt? What would happen if you turned up the volume on your feelings?

Your Emotional Guidance System is your shared resources; your shared resources are your Emotional Guidance System.

Because feelings and emotions are a shared resource, your Emotional Guidance System operates like a joint bank account. You are personally responsible for it, but you're not exclusively responsible for it. You look for support and collaboration when you feel your feelings, because when you pool your resources, you can accomplish far more than you can on your own. When you allow yourself to experience the full range of emotions without interference or resistance, these partnerships work out beautifully. Everyone supports your Emotional Guidance System so it's always there when you need it. Whenever you need help or support to understand what you're feeling so you can choose your path, someone is always there to pick up the slack, and you do the same for them. But when you pursue only pleasurable feelings and avoid or suppress anything that feels uncomfortable, other people don't contribute equally, and your Emotional Guidance System account is often overdrawn. You may do your part to make deposits and maintain your resources, but other people's withdrawals drain the account and leave you feeling unsupported and used. On a personal level, when you avoid feeling your feelings, these inequalities will play out in your relationships and with your actual shared resources, such as joint bank accounts, communal food, office supplies, and shared spaces. It may feel like you're doing all the work and you're cleaning up other people's messes. As hard as it can be, you must find the line that marks the boundary of My Business, and stay on your side of it. You pool your resources with others because you want the support of a community. You believe that when you have a communal safety net, you won't suffer through negative, uncomfortable, or unpleasant feelings.

Feelings are just feelings: they can't hurt you because your authentic Self is invulnerable. But until you remember this truth, you try to avoid anything unpleasant or painful because you view those experiences as threatening. You believe negative feelings are caused by conditions in the outside world, but in fact, the conditions are the effect of your feelings. Feelings are how your Emotional Guidance System helps you to identify your current level of consciousness. This is important, because everything you experience is a match to that vibration. An unpleasant feeling warns you that you are tuned to a low vibration of consciousness. You can choose a better-feeling thought and tune to a higher level of consciousness, which will then create a new set of conditions. You are the most sensitive to negativity—and the most likely to turn down the volume on your Emotional Guidance System rather than change the frequency—with your shared resources. Not every partnership or collaboration works out for the best. Shared resources only benefit you if they benefit everyone, and if the others in the group are not contributing equally, you won't receive any benefits. But if you don't notice the negative feelings you experience around a shared resource, you won't see the early warning signs and you'll stay in much longer than you needed to.

You can learn how to navigate using your Emotional Guidance System by engaging with your shared resources. Begin by identifying your shared resources. These include every situation where you collaborate with others or pool your resources so that you get a smaller slice of a larger pie. Consider that when you engage with those shared resources, what you're really sharing is your feelings and emotions. Evaluate whether you are pulling your own weight in this endeavor. If you don't feel supported and you don't see the advantages of the collaboration, it may be a sign that you aren't contributing enough. It could also be a sign that you aren't claiming the support that's available to you. Explore your relationship to your shared resources and find the correct point of balance with how you give and receive feelings and emotions. And if the feelings you feel around your shared resources are consistently negative, use your Emotional Guidance System to evaluate whether this arrangement is supporting you or not. The more you are willing to listen to your Emotional Guidance System, the more you will benefit from pooling your resources.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your shared resources resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your Emotional Guidance System and your shared resources resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you pool your resources of your feelings and emotions with other people? How do you contribute to that collective? What benefits do you receive in return?

Who has access to the bank account of your feelings and emotions? Do they make more contributions to the balance or withdrawals? Does this arrangement work for you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What expectations do you have about everyone's role with feelings and emotions? Do you meet those expectations? Do other people meet them?

Where are the limits of My Business with your feelings and emotions? What is the limit of how much you can make up for other people's shortfalls? What is the limit of how much you can expect other people to make up for your shortfalls?

What feelings do you experience with your shared resources? When do you experience them?

What feelings do you avoid with your shared resources? When do you experience these feelings?

On a scale of 1 to 10, with 10 being the most intense, how much do you feel your feelings with your shared resources? What would happen if you turned up the volume on your feelings?

The Moon, the Ruler of your Eighth House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Eighth House shows where you are most susceptible to debt and financial loss. This is the area of life where your ambitions exceed your personal resources, so you seek the support of other individuals to finance your goals. This is where you seek partners and investors and are the most willing to collaborate and to pool your resources with others.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on the Moon that explores the house that the Moon, the Ruler of your Eighth House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by the Moon, the Ruler of your Eighth House. Now revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience the Moon as the ruler of your Eighth House, and notice how the house the Moon occupies influences your understanding.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the First House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your First House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to manage your subjective safety needs, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to experience your feelings and emotions, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to repay your debts and obligations, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Second House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Second House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to manage your subjective safety needs. You will spend money and use your talents to experience your feelings and emotions. You will spend money and use your talents to repay your debts and obligations. And you will spend money and use your talents to merge your assets and manage your shared resources. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Third House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Third House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to manage your subjective safety needs, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to experience your feelings and emotions, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to repay your debts and obligations, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Fourth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Fourth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you manage your subjective safety needs, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you experience your feelings and emotions, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you repay your debts and obligations, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you merge your assets and manage your shared resources, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Fifth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Fifth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to manage your subjective safety needs, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to experience your feelings and emotions, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to repay your debts and obligations, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Sixth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Sixth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to manage your subjective safety needs, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to experience your feelings and emotions, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to repay your debts and obligations, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Seventh House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Seventh House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to manage your subjective safety needs for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to experience your feelings and emotions for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to repay your debts and obligations for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to merge your assets and manage your shared resources for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Eighth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Eighth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to manage your subjective safety needs. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to experience your feelings and emotions. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to repay your debts and obligations. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to merge your assets and manage your shared resources. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the in the Ninth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Ninth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to manage your subjective safety needs because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to experience your feelings and emotions because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to repay your debts and obligations because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to merge your assets and manage your shared resources because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the Tenth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Tenth House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to manage your subjective safety needs, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to experience your feelings and emotions, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to repay your debts and obligations, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the Eleventh House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to manage your subjective safety needs so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to experience your feelings and emotions so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to repay your debts and obligations so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to merge your assets and manage your shared resources so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in the Twelfth House

With The Moon, the Ruler of the Eighth House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your subjective safety needs, your Emotional Guidance System, your debt, and your shared resources. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to manage your subjective safety needs, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to experience your feelings and emotions, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to repay your debts and obligations, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to merge your assets and manage your shared resources, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.