

Mars Rules the Second House

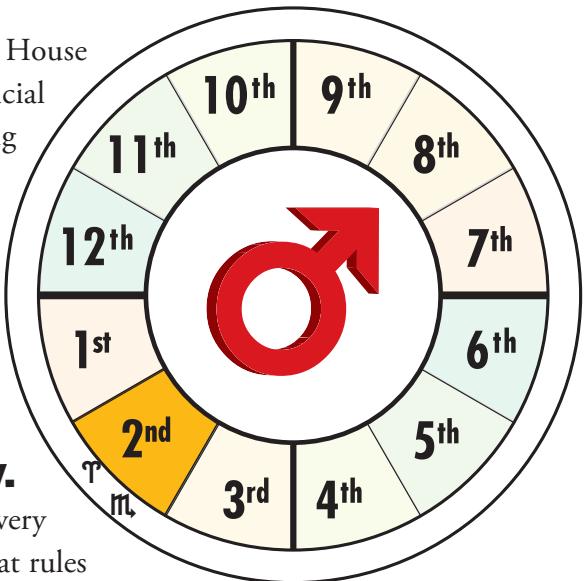

Both directly and indirectly the Second House is about money. It represents your financial resources, your salary, your earning potential, and your actual money. It also represents your skills and talents, which show how you can earn money. The planet that rules the Second House shows your attitudes towards money, and the skills that you have available to you to earn money.

The Second House is your money.

The Second House is your money and resources. It's every tangible asset that you can call "mine." The planet that rules your Second House is your money. It determines your attitudes towards money, how you earn money, how you manage money, and how you spend money. Because money is such a major concern in your life, it's important to understand the truth about money. You confuse money with prosperity, which is what you really care about, and while they're related, they're not the same thing.

Prosperity is the experience of absolute sufficiency. When you are prosperous, all of your material needs are met. More importantly, prosperity means that you are able to enjoy the experience of sufficiency because all of your emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs are met as well. Money seems to be an essential part of prosperity because money seems to make it possible (or at least easier) to meet your material needs, and prosperous people always have plenty of money flowing through their lives. But the truth is that money is the effect of prosperity, not the cause of it. When you meet the needs and learn the lessons of the planet that rules your Second House, you create prosperity.

You don't care about money. You care about the things that money represents. Money is energy, and energy is infinite. Money often shows up as a conduit that facilitates the experiences that you care about, just as electricity is a conduit that powers your appliances and charges your phone. You don't worry about how electricity works and you don't obsess about moving it from the power plant to the outlet to your television. Worrying about money is no different. Money is none of your business. Focus on the truth that you live in an infinite Universe, direct your attention towards the experiences you would like to create, and connect with your prosperity. The energy of money will flow freely through your life, and just like electricity, you'll be able to take it for granted, knowing when you need it, it will be there for you.

The Second House is your skills and talents.

The Second House represents your skills and talents. Specifically, it represents skills and talents that you can use to experience prosperity and earn money. The skills that help you to experience prosperity are intangible skills that connect you with the truth and help you reject the appearance of lack, limitation, and competition in your reality. These skills involve mastering the expressions of the planet that rules your Second House. The skills that help you to earn money are tangible; they're the talents you brag about on your résumé. Just as money is the effect of prosperity, your tangible skills are the effect of your intangible skills.

No one is born talented. You develop skills by rewiring the brain and upgrading specific neural pathways. The Talent Code, by Daniel Coyle (a book I can't recommend highly enough), explores how we develop skills and become talented through a process called deep practice. Deep practice is slow and focused, and it also requires struggle. The struggle causes the brain to upgrade the neural pathway by wrapping it in myelin. Consistent struggle is a requirement to develop skills, and upgrading your neural network takes time. You won't notice any improvement in your tangible skills until you've finished upgrading the circuits, so you need something to motivate you to stay the course. The needs of the planet that rules your Second House motivate you. They push you to stick with the deep practice and to endure the struggle and frustration until you see results.

Mars Rules the Second House

Your ego is your money; your money is your ego.

For you, your ego, the character you play in the story of your life, is hard currency. Who you think you are has value and can be exchanged for goods and services, and even for cash. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, you create prosperity in your life. Other people see your value and want to compensate you for it. You experience absolute sufficiency because all of your material needs are met, and you enjoy that sufficiency because your emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs are met as well. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, you experience lack in every dimension of your life. You notice this on a personal level because you never seem to have enough money. When you lack self-confidence, you worry about money. No matter what you do, there always seems to be more money going out than there is coming in. When you appreciate your sufficiency in this moment, and recognize the truth that right now, in this moment, you have all you need, your sufficiency will grow. The real reason you care about money is that you believe that when you have enough money, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your money, because you identify personally with money, and feel the need to protect and defend it. You believe that the more money you have, the more secure you will be in your identity, but this also means that without your money, you lack self-confidence, and feel weak and powerless. You mistakenly believe that your self-worth is linked to the balance in your checking account.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with your money and finances. Consider that in your life, money is really about your ego and who you think you are. Money flows in your life when you connect with your "little s" self and have confidence in the character you play. When you lose your connection to your character and care only about the money, you create the experience of lack. Take some time to consider your relationship to your money and finances. Identify where your sense of self and the character you play helps you to earn your money. Notice how you express your identity when you spend your money. Consider what your approach to saving and investing your money says about who you are. Build your awareness that the way that you engage with your money is the way that you engage with your ego. You can then take the confidence you feel when you manage your finances and bring it to other parts of your life. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more prosperity you will enjoy.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your ego and your money resonated the most with you?

Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your money resonated the least with you?

What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How important is money to you? How do you use money to protect and defend yourself?

How much does money contribute to your self-worth and self-confidence? How do you feel about yourself when you have enough money? How do you feel about yourself when you don't have enough money? Do you feel like a different person based on your net worth? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

How do you use money to express your ego?

How does the balance in your checking account affect how you feel about your identity?

What does the balance in your checking account tell you about your relationship to your identity and your ego?

What is it about your money that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your money and resources?

Who would you be without your money? How would you know yourself?

Your ego is your skills and talents; your skills and talents are your ego.

Because managing your ego is a skill, it doesn't come naturally to you. It's something you have to learn, practice, and train for, and the more time you invest in mastering it, the more talented you become at it. This matters because expressing your ego and your "little s" self motivates you to develop every other skill and talent in your life. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, you easily acquire new skills and improve your current skills. Your talents have value and make substantial contributions to your prosperity. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, you don't excel at anything. At best, you are competent at the things you care about, but none of your skills are advanced enough to command attention or compensation. You lack the inspiration and motivation to improve. Developing talent involves consistent struggle, and without something to push you, it's difficult to stay the course. You want to excel and be the best at what you do because you believe that when you are the best, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your skills and talents, because you identify personally with your skills and talents, and feel the need to protect and defend them. Your status and ranking compared to other people can begin to define you to yourself. You base your worth on your skills, and if anything disrupts your skills, you don't know who you are.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with your skills and talents. Pick any skill that you would like to learn or improve, and follow a structured program of consistent, daily practice to develop it. Remember that the goal is less about mastering the new skill and more about your ego and self-confidence. You will use your ego to motivate you to stick with the program, overcome your resistance, and practice consistently. The improvements with your self-confidence will keep you motivated to develop the skill. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more you will excel and be prospered by your talents.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your ego and your skills and talents resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your skills and talents resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How important are your skills and talents to you? How often do you compare yourself and your abilities to other people? How do you feel when you go up in the rankings? How do you feel when you go down?

What motivates you to develop new skills or to improve your current skills? Are you motivated by praise and approval? Or are you more motivated when someone says you're not good enough, and then you set out to prove them wrong?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

How do you practice and train to develop your ego and sense of self?

How have other people functioned as your coach to help you get better at knowing yourself? Who gives you feedback and helps you correct your mistakes?

How does your ego show up in your life as a marketable skill? How does your skill with your ego help you to earn money?

What is it about your skills and talents that you feel the need to protect and defend?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your skills and talents?

Who would you be without your skills and talents? How would you know yourself?

Your anger is your money; your money is your anger.

For you, anger is hard currency. Your anger has value and can be exchanged for goods and services, and even for cash. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you create prosperity in your life. Other people see your value and want to compensate you for it. You experience absolute sufficiency because all of your material needs are met, and you enjoy that sufficiency because your emotional, psychological, and spiritual needs are met as well. But when you struggle with your anger, either repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, you experience lack in every dimension of your life. You notice this on a personal level because you never seem to have enough money. When you fail to manage the energy of your anger, you worry about money. No matter what you do, there always seems to be more money going out than there is coming in. When you appreciate your sufficiency in this moment, and recognize the truth that right now, in this moment, you have all you need, your sufficiency will grow. The real reason you care about money is that you believe that when you have enough money, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your money, because your money is an area of your life where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your money, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your money only makes the situation worse. Just as your anger is never about what you think it's about, your money isn't about what you think it's about. Your frustration and anger about money comes from your belief that money is the source of prosperity, and that without money, you won't be prosperous. The truth is that money is the effect of prosperity, not the cause of it.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your money and finances. Consider that in your life, money is really about your anger. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed, you are experiencing the energy of anger. Money flows in your life when you connect with your anger and use that energy creatively. When you lose your connection to your anger and care only about the money, you create the experience of lack. Take some time to consider your relationship to your money and finances. Notice how you use the energy of your anger to earn your money. Find your anger in how you spend your money. Identify how your anger influences how you save and invest your money. As you become conscious of this energy in your money and finances, you can begin to recognize it in other areas of your life. The more you learn to master your anger, the more prosperity you will enjoy.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your anger and your money resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your money resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Do you see any value to the energy of anger? Has anger ever helped you to earn money? Why or why not?

How does your relationship to money change when you feel angry? What are examples of how you would spend your money only if you felt angry? Why wouldn't you spend money that way under normal circumstances?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

How do you use money to express anger?

How does the balance in your checking account affect how conscious you are of anger?

What does the balance in your checking account tell you about your relationship to anger?

What are some examples of how money makes you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you express your anger at money? How does that affect the situation?

Your anger is your skills and talents; your skills and talents are your anger.

Because anger is a skill, it doesn't come naturally to you. It's something you have to learn, practice, and train for, and the more time you invest in mastering it, the more talented you become at it. This matters because anger motivates you to develop every other skill and talent in your life. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you easily acquire new skills and improve your current skills. Your talents have value and make substantial contributions to your prosperity. But when you struggle with your anger, either repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, you don't excel at anything. At best, you are competent at the things you care about, but none of your skills are advanced enough to command attention or compensation. You lack the inspiration and motivation to improve. Developing talent involves consistent struggle, and without something to push you, it's difficult to stay the course. You want to excel and be the best at what you do because you believe that when you are the best, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your skills and talents, because your skills and talents are where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your skills and talents, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your skills and talents only makes the situation worse. If you let your frustration boil over and feel overwhelmed, instead of addressing the issue and improving your skills, you might give up entirely.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your skills and talents. Pick any skill that you would like to learn or improve, and follow a structured program of consistent, daily practice to develop it. Remember that the goal is less about mastering the new skill and more about mastering your anger. You will use the energy of your anger to motivate you to stick with the program, overcome your resistance, and practice consistently. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed, you are experiencing the energy of anger. When you practice and fail or make a mistake, you tap into the energy of anger. Choose to use that energy to try again instead of giving up or venting the anger somewhere else. As you learn to channel your anger, you will feel more powerful, and this will keep you motivated to develop the skill. The more you learn to master your anger, the more you will excel and be prospered by your talents.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your anger and your skills and talents resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your skills and talents resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Choose an example of something you are good at. How do you experience the energy of anger when you are involved in this activity? What happens when you encounter an obstacle or make a mistake?

When you are learning a new skill, how do you direct the energy of your anger (which may show up as frustration, annoyance, or impatience)? How do you direct that energy when it shows up in other situations?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

How do you practice and train to develop your anger mastery skills?

How have other people functioned as your coach to help you get better at mastering your anger? Who gives you feedback and helps you correct your mistakes?

How does anger show up in your life as a marketable skill? How does your skill with anger help you to earn money?

What are some examples of how your skills and talents make you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your skills and talents to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your skills and talents? How does that affect the situation?

Mars, the Ruler of your Second House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Second House shows where, and occasionally how, you earn your money. You express your skills and talents using the resources available in this house. Engaging in the affairs of this house will usually increase your wealth.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Mars that explores the house that Mars, the Ruler of your Second House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Mars, the Ruler of your Second House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Mars as the ruler of your Second House, and notice how the house Mars occupies influences your understanding.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the First House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your First House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to be confident of who you think you are, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to channel the energy of anger constructively, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to earn money, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to develop your skills and talents, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the in the Second House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Second House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to be confident of who you think you are. You will spend money and use your talents to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will spend money and use your talents to earn money. And you will spend money and use your talents to develop your skills and talents. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the in the Third House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Third House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to earn money, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to develop your skills and talents, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the in the Fourth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Fourth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you be confident of who you think you are, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you channel the energy of anger constructively, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you earn money, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you develop your skills and talents, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Fifth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Fifth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to be confident of who you think you are, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to earn money, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to develop your skills and talents, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Sixth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Sixth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to earn money, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to develop your skills and talents, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Seventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Seventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to be confident of who you think you are for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to channel the energy of anger constructively for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to earn money for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to develop your skills and talents for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Eighth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Eighth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to be confident of who you think you are. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to earn money. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to develop your skills and talents. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Ninth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Ninth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to be confident of who you think you are because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to channel the energy of anger constructively because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to earn money because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to develop your skills and talents because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Tenth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Tenth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to be confident of who you think you are, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to channel the energy of anger constructively, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to earn money, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to develop your skills and talents, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Eleventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to be confident of who you think you are so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to channel the energy of anger constructively so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to earn money so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to develop your skills and talents so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in the Twelfth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Second House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your ego, your anger, your money, and your skills and talents. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to be confident of who you think you are, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to channel the energy of anger constructively, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to earn money, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to develop your skills and talents, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.