

Mars Rules the Third House

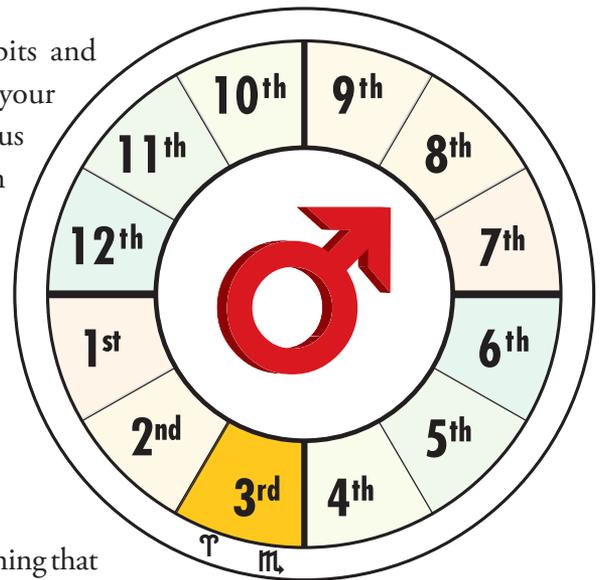

The Third House contains all of your habits and routines. It's your neighborhood and your comfort zone. You don't have to be conscious of your choices or your actions because nothing in the Third House is new, unfamiliar, or unexpected. Because of this, triggers and disruptions to the Third House can show up as accidents and injuries—events that could have been avoided had you been paying closer attention.

The Third House is your comfort zone.

The Third House is your comfort zone. It includes everything that is familiar to you, as well as anything that is local. It has a geographical component that includes your neighborhood and any physical location you know well enough to navigate without a map. It also includes comfortable (or at least familiar) relationships with siblings, cousins, neighbors, and the people you encounter as you go about your daily routine. There are no surprises in the Third House; you know it like the back of your hand. And that's not always a good thing.

Variety is the spice of life. Without the occasional surprise, life would be bland. Things can be familiar without always staying exactly the same. The trick with your comfort zone is to find just the right amount of new to keep you interested and engaged with your life but not so much new that your comfort zone stops being familiar. If you only focus on what's familiar, the walls of your comfort zone will close in on you and your world will get very small, very quickly. This can happen without your noticing because it's easy to take your comfort zone for granted. Your comfort zone is familiar, so you think you know everything about it, but that's not ever true. There's always something new to discover. When you notice things you've overlooked in your comfort zone, or learn something new about your comfort zone, your comfort zone expands.

The planet that rules your Third House is your comfort zone. On the one hand, you are familiar with the shape of this Universal Puzzle Piece and you are comfortable expressing the needs of the planet and learning its lessons. But you must be careful not to take this planet for granted. You need to build on what is familiar to you, and explore new ways to express the needs of the planet. The shape of this puzzle piece is more subtle and more detailed than you know. You can always discover new ways that it can connect with your personal puzzle pieces. Every time you expand your comfort zone, you create a light bulb moment.

The Third House is your habits and routines.

The Third House is your habits and routines. These are the behaviors that you have performed so many times that you don't have to think about them unless something new comes along to disrupt the expected flow. They can be as simple as the route you take to work, or the way you order your coffee in the morning. They can be as complicated as how you organize your financial records to prepare to file your taxes, or how you organize your kitchen to prepare Christmas dinner for your family. The Third House also relates to the behaviors, habits, and routines that you might like to change—although changing these “bad habits,” is often difficult.

You use your habits and routines to make your life easier. Once something becomes a habit, you don't have to pay attention to it. The routine frees up time and energy and allows you to focus on other things. One of the best examples of this is your daily commute to work. Whether you drive or take public transportation, you don't really notice your commute unless something unexpected disrupts it. You get to use that time to think about other things, and you trust that you'll know when you need to pay attention so you don't miss your exit. But routines can easily become ruts, and ruts can create problems. You can become so dependent on your habits and routines that you don't know how to function without them. You get so used to not having to pay attention that you don't notice when the conditions have changed, so you don't adjust your behavior in time. This can lead to mistakes and accidents that could have been avoided easily if only you were paying attention.

The planet that rules your Third House is your habits and routines. You have learned to automate how you meet the needs of that planet and let it run on autopilot, and most of the time, this works well for you and saves you time and effort. But be careful not to become too dependent on those habitual behaviors. If you don't pay enough attention to how you express the needs of the planet that rules your Third House, it will create problems for you.

Mars Rules the Third House

Your ego is your comfort zone; your comfort zone is your ego.

Your ego is your comfort zone. It's familiar to you, it's always close, and it's easily accessible. You know what to expect with your “little s” self and the character you play, so there are no surprises. Often, this means your experience of your “little s” self is limited to what you already know or what you have already experienced. You take your ego for granted, and because of that, you may be missing a lot. Your comfort zone can be a very seductive trap. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, you are relaxed and alert. You easily monitor your familiar environment to make sure it's operating smoothly, and you know that if anything unexpected pops up, you can respond instantly and appropriately. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, you don't enjoy the comfort of your familiar environment because you're too busy controlling it. You feel unprepared to handle any surprises or disruptions, and you approach anything new or different with suspicion. On a personal level, when you lack self-confidence, you may become obsessed with trivial details and need to arrange things in your environment to your liking before you are able to address the bigger issues. When you are finally comfortable, you think you will be protected from the unexpected. And you believe that when you don't have to worry about the unknown, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your comfort zone, because you identify personally with your comfort zone, and feel the need to protect and defend it. Your level of confidence in your identity increases as you approach the center of your comfort zone. If you don't feel comfortable or don't know what to expect in your environment, you don't know how to respond or behave.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with your comfort zone. Review your familiar environment and begin to notice how your ego and your "little s" self shows up for you there. Then take a closer look. The key to your comfort zone is your expectations. You expect your character to be familiar so you take it for granted, and this means you only notice a fraction of it. If you change your expectations, and expect that you can discover something new and unfamiliar about the character you play, even from within your comfort zone, your comfort zone will expand. Approach your character from a different angle or a new direction. Change your focus and consider it from up close or from a greater distance. Let the familiar parts of your "little s" self form the background so the new insights will stand out by contrast. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more you will be able to respond to surprises and unexpected events.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your ego and your comfort zone resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your comfort zone resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Where do you feel the most confident in yourself? What are the specific environments or locations where you know who you are and how to behave, and you know you can handle anything that happens?

What are the most important qualities of those parts of your comfort zone? What is it about those environments do you feel the need to protect or defend? What changes would make you the most upset?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

Consider the actual geographical locations in your comfort zone. How does your ego show up for you in each of those settings? Where do you find your “little s” self in each of those settings?

Think of a time (and location) when you were outside of your comfort zone. Where did your ego show up for you there? Can you find it?

What are the boundaries of your comfort zone with your “little s” self? Where and when does the character you play begin to feel uncomfortable and unfamiliar for you?

What is it about your comfort zone that you feel the need to protect and defend?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your comfort zone?

Who would you be without your comfort zone? How would you know yourself?

Your ego is your habits and routines; your habits and routines are your ego.

Because expressing your ego is a habit and a routine, your “little s” self runs on autopilot. You make familiar choices with your ego and rely on whatever has worked for you in the past. You always take the path of least resistance with the character you play, and changing your established patterns with it can be challenging. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, you don't need to worry about your ego because it's automated and doesn't require your attention. This frees you up to focus on other things. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, that automation creates problems for you. You don't notice that conditions have changed, so you don't make the necessary adjustments to your behaviors. This leads to mistakes and accidents that could have been avoided easily if only you were paying attention. On a personal level, when you lack self-confidence, your habits and routines can create a rut in your life, making you feel stuck and limited. You become dependent on your routine, and don't know how to function without it. You create habits and routines because they make your life easier, freeing up your time and energy.

And you believe that when you have more time and energy, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your habits and routines, because you identify personally with your habits and routines, and feel the need to protect and defend them. You take pride in how you automate your life, and in how your habits and routines save you time and make your life more productive and efficient. You believe that your habits and routines are an extension of your identity, so you take any criticism of them personally.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with your habits and routines. Identify a few examples of behaviors that you engage in regularly, or routines that you don't think about. You created these habits because they automate or simplify a part of your life, but they also create the opportunity for you to recognize the presence of your ego and your "little s" self. Consider each habit and routine and identify how, precisely, it is supposed to make your life easier. Ultimately, you hope these behaviors will help you to feel more confident because you won't have to waste time and energy on things that don't interest you or your character. Now identify what you do with the time and energy these habits save you. How you choose to direct your attention also helps you to understand your "little s" self, because those are things that interest you. When you become more conscious of the things you don't enjoy (and hope to automate with habits and routines), and more conscious of the things you do enjoy, you get a clearer understanding of your ego and your "little s" self. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more time and energy you can free up in your life.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your ego and your habits and routines resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your habits and routines resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Choose a habit or a routine in your life that saves you time or makes your life easier. What experiences does that behavior limit or eliminate for you? What do you get to experience or focus on instead? What does this tell you about the character you play and what motivates and interests that character?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

How does your ego show up in your life without your noticing it? When do you only notice your ego and your “little s” self in hindsight, after you’ve experienced it?

Are there habits and routines with the character you play that you would like to change? What are they and how would you like to change them?

What is it about your habits and routines that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your habits and routines?

Who would you be without your habits and routines? How would you know yourself?

Your anger is your comfort zone; your comfort zone is your anger.

Your anger is your comfort zone. It’s familiar to you, it’s always close, and it’s easily accessible. You know what to expect with your anger, so there are no surprises. Often, this means your experience of anger is limited to what you already know or what you have already experienced. You take anger for granted, and because of that, you may be missing a lot. Your comfort zone can be a very seductive trap. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you are relaxed and alert. You easily monitor your familiar environment to make sure it’s operating smoothly, and you know that if anything unexpected pops up, you can respond instantly and appropriately. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, you don’t enjoy the comfort of your familiar environment because you’re too busy controlling it. You feel unprepared to handle any surprises or disruptions, and you approach anything new or different with suspicion. On a personal level, when you fail to address your anger, you may become obsessed with trivial details and need to arrange things in your environment to your liking before you are able to address the bigger issues. When you are finally comfortable, you think you will be protected from the unexpected. And you believe that when you don’t have to worry about the unknown, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won’t piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your comfort zone, because your comfort zone is an area where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your comfort zone, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your comfort zone only makes the situation worse. But the biggest challenge is that because anger is your comfort zone, you may take it for granted and not notice it.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your comfort zone. Review your familiar environment and begin to notice how anger shows up for you there. The key to your comfort zone is your expectations. You expect the energy of anger to be familiar so you take it for granted, and this means you only notice a fraction of it. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed, you are experiencing the energy of anger. Begin to observe how you experience your comfort zone from this new perspective, and you will be amazed at how much anger, and how much energy, is present there, waiting for you to use it. The more you learn to master your anger, the more you will be able to respond to surprises and unexpected events.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your anger and your comfort zone resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your comfort zone resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What is your level of comfort with the energy of anger? How much impatience, frustration, annoyance, or stress do you expect to experience, so you don't really notice it?

In which locations or elements of your comfort zone do you expect to experience the energy of anger? In which parts of your comfort zone do you not expect to experience the energy of anger?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

Consider the actual geographical locations in your comfort zone. How does your anger show up for you in each of those settings? Where do you find your anger in each of those settings?

Think of a time (and location) when you were outside of your comfort zone. Where did anger show up for you there? Can you find it?

What are the boundaries of your comfort zone with your anger? Where and when does the energy of anger begin to feel uncomfortable and unfamiliar for you?

What are some examples of how your comfort zone makes you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your comfort zone to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your comfort zone? How does that affect the situation?

Your anger is your habits and routines; your habits and routines are your anger.

Because anger is a habit and a routine, your anger runs on autopilot. You make familiar choices with anger and rely on whatever has worked for you in the past. You always take the path of least resistance with your anger, and changing your established patterns with it can be challenging. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you don't need to worry about how you direct the energy of your anger because it's automated and doesn't require your attention. This frees you up to focus on other things. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, that automation creates problems for you. You don't notice that conditions have changed, so you don't make the necessary adjustments to your behaviors. This leads to mistakes and accidents that could have been avoided easily if only you were paying attention. On a personal level, when you fail to address your anger, your habits and routines can create a rut in your life, making you feel stuck and limited. You become dependent on your routine, and don't know how to function without it. You create habits and routines because they make your life easier, freeing up your time and energy. And you believe that when you have more time and energy, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your habits and routines, because your habits and routines are where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your habits and routines, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your habits and routines only makes the situation worse. But the bigger concern is how you habitually deal with the energy of anger. So long as you have unconscious patterns that govern how you experience anger, you have not mastered your anger. You must learn to use it or it will use you.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your habits and routines. Identify a few examples of behaviors that you engage in regularly, or routines that you don't think about. You created these habits because they automate or simplify a part of your life, but they also create the opportunity for you to recognize the presence of your anger. Consider each habit and routine and identify how, precisely, it is supposed to make your life easier. You may expect that you created the routine to limit your experience of anger. The pattern is supposed to speed things up, make your life more efficient, and free you from dealing with things that you don't want to deal with. But does the behavior accomplish that? You may discover habits and routines that actually do the opposite. They complicate things that could be simple, create challenges and obstacles for you, and ultimately make you more conscious of the energy of your anger. You can learn to take advantage of these behaviors, because they do serve an important purpose. They put you in touch with a powerful source of energy. All you need to do is learn to master your anger so you can use that energy in creative, constructive ways. The more you learn to master your anger, the more time and energy you can free up in your life.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your anger and your habits and routines resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your habits and routines resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Choose an example of a habit or a routine in your life that you created (and continue to access) because you believe it makes your life easier and more efficient. What experience is that routine meant to limit or eliminate?

Does that habit or routine do what you expect it to do? Does it actually make your life easier? Or does it keep you connected to the energy of your anger?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of your routine behaviors with anger?

How does anger show up in your life without your noticing it? When do you only notice the energy of anger in hindsight, after you've experienced it?

Are there habits and routines with how you experience anger that you would like to change? What are they and how would you like to change them?

What are some examples of how your habits and routines make you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your habits and routines to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your habits and routines? How does that affect things?

Mars, the Ruler of your Third House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Third House shows where you most rely on habits, routine, and familiarity. This is the area of life where you access your network, and it's where you encounter your communication hub. This is where you find your comfort zone. This is also the area of your life where your habitual programming can make changing your behaviors especially challenging.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Mars that explores the house that Mars, the Ruler of your Third House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Mars, the Ruler of your Third House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Mars as the ruler of your Third House, and notice how the house Mars occupies influences your understanding.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the First House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your First House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to be confident of who you think you are, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to channel the energy of anger constructively, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to automate your life by creating habits and routines, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Second House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Second House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to be confident of who you think you are. You will spend money and use your talents to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will spend money and use your talents to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected. And you will spend money and use your talents to automate your life by creating habits and routines. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Third House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Third House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to automate your life by creating habits and routines, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Fourth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Fourth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you be confident of who you think you are, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you channel the energy of anger constructively, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you automate your life by creating habits and routines, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Fifth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Fifth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to be confident of who you think you are, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to automate your life by creating habits and routines, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Sixth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Sixth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to automate your life by creating habits and routines, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Seventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Seventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to be confident of who you think you are for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to channel the energy of anger constructively for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to automate your life by creating habits and routines for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Eighth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Eighth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to be confident of who you think you are. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to automate your life by creating habits and routines. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the in the Ninth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Ninth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to be confident of who you think you are because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to channel the energy of anger constructively because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to automate your life by creating habits and routines because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the Tenth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Tenth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to be confident of who you think you are, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to channel the energy of anger constructively, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to automate your life by creating habits and routines, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the Eleventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to be confident of who you think you are so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to channel the energy of anger constructively so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to automate your life by creating habits and routines so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in the Twelfth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Third House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your ego, your anger, your comfort zone, and your habits and routines. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to be confident of who you think you are, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to channel the energy of anger constructively, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to expand your comfort zone to protect yourself from the unexpected, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to automate your life by creating habits and routines, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.