

Mars Rules the Sixth House

The Sixth House is all work and no play. In modern usage, it's the house of service, but that glosses over the deeper themes. It's more accurate to call the Sixth House the house of indentured service, because fundamentally, it's the house of slavery. The Sixth House represents hard work you are obligated to perform, and for which you receive no recognition, prestige, or advancement. In other words, the Sixth House is your job. It's also the house of illness and disease (in contrast to the First House, which relates to your health).

The Sixth House is your job.

The Sixth House is your job, but it's not exclusively your actual job and the work you do for a paycheck. The Sixth House is the work that you do because you have to do it, and you can't expect to receive any recognition or advancement for it. Your real job is to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House. Meeting those needs requires constant work and attention. You never get a break, much less a vacation, and waiting for other people to appreciate your efforts is a complete waste of time. The degree of effort required can fluctuate. Sometimes you are able to lighten the load so that the work itself is easy for you. Other times, it's a grind, and your only reward for your hard work is more work. But whatever your passing attitude is towards the work, deep down, you understand that the work matters to you, which is why you keep doing it. One of the secrets of the Sixth House is to view your work as selfless service. When you can view your job from this perspective and know that you are contributing to something meaningful and much bigger than yourself, the work becomes easier, and you no longer care that you won't be recognized or appreciated for it.

This can be challenging to accomplish in your actual workplace. It's rare to feel empowered around your external job. You have to show up for work and put up with the workplace dynamic because you need your paycheck, but there are any number of ways you would rather spend your time. But consider that even in your external job, your real job is still to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House. If you engage with your job from this perspective, it becomes easier for you to find a higher purpose to it, which can then make your work experience less stressful. At least it can give you something to think about to get you through to lunch.

The Sixth House is your sickness.

It's important to understand your sickness. Any physical or health-related problems you experience in your body are the effect of your sickness, but they're not your actual sickness. The physical problems are the result of imbalances in your life, and they can involve imbalance in any combination of your physical, emotional, mental, or spiritual dimensions. Your sickness is what causes the imbalances.

Everybody has a sickness. When you learn to manage and monitor it, you can limit the amount of actual physical sickness you experience. The planet that rules your Sixth House is your sickness. When you try to meet the needs of that planet, you have the most difficulty maintaining balance. You may put too much attention on those needs, which causes you to neglect or ignore other needs in your life. You may not pay enough attention to those needs. And it's also possible to swing from one extreme to the other. In any case, when you are out of alignment with the planet that rules your Sixth House, you create imbalance in your life, and if you don't address those imbalances, they will eventually show up in your physical body as acute or chronic health challenges. Treating the symptoms doesn't address the problem. Healing requires you to address your sickness.

Mars Rules the Sixth House

Your ego is your job; your job is your ego.

Whatever you may do for a living, your real job is your ego. Playing the character of your "little s" self is something you have to work at, every day, whether you feel like it or not. No one else is going to play your character for you, which means you never get a break, much less a vacation. And you can't expect anyone to notice or appreciate your hard work, either. Sometimes, your ego hardly seems worth the effort. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, you don't mind doing your job. The work itself is easy for you, and you even have a sense that by doing your job and inhabiting your character effectively, you are performing a higher service. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, expressing your "little s" self is a struggle. The more you accomplish, the more you are expected to do. On a personal level, when you lack self-confidence, your actual job—the work you perform for others in exchange for a paycheck—crushes your very soul. By the end of the day, you have no life left in you. And you have to wake up the next morning and do it all over again. You want to find a higher purpose to your hard work, because when your job has purpose, the work gets easier, and you believe that when that happens, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your job, because you identify personally with your job, and feel the need to protect and defend it. In many ways you define the character of your "little s" self in terms of your job title and the work that you do, and you are unsure of who you are or how you are supposed to behave without that reference.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with your job. Begin by considering the work that you do: your actual job (if applicable), as well as any other tasks you are obligated to perform on a regular basis. Find the connection between that work and your experience of the character of your "little s" self. Consider that the higher purpose of the work you do is to become more confident in your identity so that you don't need to prove yourself to others. Notice how your attitude and experience of your job and your work shifts when you engage with it from this perspective. Once you have a reference for that connection, you can explore how changing your relationship to your "little s" self affects your experience of your work. Then you can apply those references to the rest of your life, becoming more skilled with how you embody the character of your "little s" self. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the easier your work and your job becomes.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your ego and your job resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your job resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you work hard to experience your "little s" self? Does anyone ever recognize you or appreciate you for your efforts?

How do you experience or pursue your "little s" self in your actual job and workplace environment? How well do you embody your "little s" self in your workplace?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What happens if you don't work at your performance of your "little s" self?

What is it about your job that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your job?

Who would you be without your job? How would you know yourself?

Your ego is your sickness; your sickness is your ego.

Your ego is your sickness. You often go to extremes to express your “little s” self. Putting so much emphasis on the character you play can create imbalances in your life because you ignore other important aspects. When you are confident of your identity and don’t need to prove yourself to others, you have a balanced approach to your ego. It receives the right amount of attention and energy, but it doesn’t cause you to neglect other parts of your life. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, your approach to your ego and “little s” self is imbalanced. You become increasingly obsessed with it. You neglect other parts of your life, and ignore the warning signs that something is wrong and requires your attention. If you keep this up long enough, it will create imbalances in your physical body. At first, it will only be minor physical inconveniences, but if you ignore these warnings and do not change your behavior, you could create chronic illness or serious disability. What you really want is to be able to make the symptoms disappear without having to change your behavior in any way. You believe that when your physical body stops demanding that you pay attention and restore balance in your life, other people won’t challenge or attack you and you won’t have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you’re giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it’s okay to make mistakes, and that you don’t always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your sickness, because you identify personally with your sickness, and feel the need to protect and defend it. You view the imbalances in your life, and your unwillingness to address them, as essential elements of the character of your “little s” self. You cling to them because you think they’re what makes you unique and what makes your character interesting, when all they really do is create optional suffering for your character.

You can learn about your “little s” self and the character you play by engaging with your sickness. The first step on the path to healing is admitting that you have a problem. Take a long, objective look at your history of behavior involving how you express your “little s” self. Identify exactly what you have sacrificed, overlooked, or put off in pursuit of who you think you are. Then consider what the incidental costs of those behaviors have been, specifically with regards to your health and vitality. Even relatively minor disruptions like a lack of sleep (perhaps because you can’t stop thinking about how to prove that you are right and other people are wrong), are examples of your sickness and can contribute to more serious problems. Once you are conscious of your sickness, you can set limits and goals to help you to manage it and stay in balance. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more you avoid creating imbalances in your life.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your ego and your sickness resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your sickness resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some things that you have had to give up in pursuit of your "little s" self? Is it worth the sacrifice? Why or why not?

How does your pursuit of your "little s" self affect your overall health? How much time do you spend worrying about the character you play in your life? Do you think this is a problem for you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

How do you go to extremes in pursuit of your ego? Where does your "little s" self take on too much importance in your life?

What would a healthy relationship with your ego look like for you? What behaviors would you have to change to create this relationship? Are you willing to make those changes? Why or why not?

What are some of the consequences you experience when you are out of balance with your ego?

What is it about your sickness that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your sickness?

Who would you be without your sickness? How would you know yourself?

Your anger is your job; your job is your anger.

Whatever you may do for a living, your real job is anger. Anger is something you have to work at, every day, whether you feel like it or not. No one else is going to channel the energy of anger for you, which means you never get a break, much less a vacation. And you can't expect anyone to notice or appreciate your hard work, either. Sometimes, mastering your anger hardly seems worth the effort. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you don't mind doing your job. The work itself is easy for you, and you even have a sense that by doing your job and channeling the energy of anger in constructive ways, you are performing a higher service. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, channeling the energy of your anger is a struggle. The more you accomplish, the more you are expected to do. On a personal level, when you fail to address your anger, your actual job—the work you perform for others in exchange for a paycheck—crushes your very soul. By the end of the day, you have no life left in you. And you have to wake up the next morning and do it all over again. You want to find a higher purpose to your hard work, because when your job has purpose, the work gets easier, and you believe that when that happens, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your job, because your job is an area where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your job, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your job only makes the situation worse.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your job. Begin by considering the work that you do: your actual job (if applicable), as well as any other tasks you are obligated to perform on a regular basis. Find the connection between that work and your experience of anger. Consider that the higher purpose of the work you do is to learn to channel the energy of anger in constructive and conscious ways. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed, you are experiencing the energy of anger. Notice how your attitude and experience of your job and your work shifts when you engage with it from this perspective. Once you have a reference for that connection, you can explore how changing your relationship to anger affects your experience of your work. Then you can apply those references to the rest of your life, becoming more skilled with how you channel the energy of anger. The more you learn to master your anger, the easier your work and your job becomes.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your anger and your job resonated the most with you?

Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your job resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some examples of how you work hard to experience anger? Does anyone ever recognize you or appreciate you for your efforts?

How do you experience or pursue the energy of anger in your actual job and workplace environment? How well do you direct the energy of your anger in your workplace?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What happens if you don't work at channeling the energy of your anger?

What are some examples of how your job makes you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your job to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your job? How does that affect the situation?

Your anger is your sickness; your sickness is your anger.

Anger is your sickness. You often go to extremes to deal with the energy of your anger. Putting so much emphasis on anger can create imbalances in your life because you ignore other important aspects. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you have a balanced approach to anger. It receives the right amount of attention and energy, but it doesn't cause you to neglect other parts of your life. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, your approach to anger is imbalanced. You become increasingly obsessed with it. You neglect other parts of your life, and ignore the warning signs that something is wrong and requires your attention. If you keep this up long enough, it will create imbalances in your physical body. At first, it will only be minor physical inconveniences, but if you ignore these warnings and do not change your behavior, you could create chronic illness or serious disability. What you really want is to be able to make the symptoms disappear without having to change your behavior in any way. You believe that when your physical body stops demanding that you pay attention and restore balance in your life, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your sickness, because your sickness is an area where you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration. The more you try to control your sickness, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your sickness only makes the situation worse. And of course how you handle the energy of your anger is what creates the imbalances in your life in the first place.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with your sickness. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed, you are experiencing the energy of anger. The first step on the path to healing is admitting that you have a problem. Take a long, objective look at your history of behavior involving how you experience and express anger. Identify exactly what you have sacrificed, overlooked, or put off to deal with the energy of anger. Then consider what the incidental costs of those behaviors have been, specifically with regards to your health and vitality. Even relatively minor disruptions like a lack of sleep (perhaps because you can't stop thinking about how angry you are), are examples of your sickness and can contribute to more serious problems. Once you are conscious of your sickness, you can set limits and goals to help you to manage it and stay in balance. The key is to pursue the energy of anger in moderation. As you become more comfortable and skilled with using the energy of anger in constructive ways, you can channel more of it. The more you learn to master your anger, the more you avoid creating imbalances in your life.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your anger and your sickness resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your sickness resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

What are some things that you have had to give up in pursuit of (or in avoidance of) anger? Is it worth the sacrifice? Why or why not?

How does your pursuit of anger affect your overall health? How much time do you spend worrying about anger? Do you think this is a problem for you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

How do you go to extremes in pursuit of anger? Where does anger take on too much importance in your life?

What would a healthy relationship with anger look like for you? What behaviors would you have to change to create this relationship? Are you willing to make those changes? Why or why not?

What are some of the consequences you experience when you are out of balance with anger?

What are some examples of how your sickness makes you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your sickness to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your sickness? How does that affect the situation?

Mars, the Ruler of your Sixth House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Sixth House is where you expect to labor, work, and serve. The house may directly relate to your job, or it may merely contain the resources available to you in your job and service. You must be careful how you use the resources of this house: this is the house where you encounter your sickness. If you abuse the available resources, it will increase your susceptibility to illness.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Mars that explores the house that Mars, the Ruler of your Sixth House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Mars, the Ruler of your Sixth House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Mars as the ruler of your Sixth House, and notice how the house Mars occupies influences your understanding.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the First House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your First House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to be confident of who you think you are, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to channel the energy of anger constructively, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to lighten your workload, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Second House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Second House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to be confident of who you think you are. You will spend money and use your talents to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will spend money and use your talents to lighten your workload. And you will spend money and use your talents to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Third House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Third House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to lighten your workload, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Fourth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Fourth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you be confident of who you think you are, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you channel the energy of anger constructively, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you lighten your workload, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Fifth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Fifth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to be confident of who you think you are, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to lighten your workload, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Sixth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Sixth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to lighten your workload, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Seventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Seventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to be confident of who you think you are for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to channel the energy of anger constructively for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to lighten your workload for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Eighth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Eighth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to be confident of who you think you are. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to lighten your workload. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the in the Ninth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Ninth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to be confident of who you think you are because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to channel the energy of anger constructively because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to lighten your workload because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the Tenth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Tenth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to be confident of who you think you are, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to channel the energy of anger constructively, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to lighten your workload, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the Eleventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to be confident of who you think you are so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to channel the energy of anger constructively so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to lighten your workload so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in the Twelfth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Sixth House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your ego, your anger, your job, and your sickness. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to be confident of who you think you are, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to channel the energy of anger constructively, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to lighten your workload, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to ignore the signs of imbalance in your life, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.