

Mars Rules the Seventh House

The Seventh House contains the individuals you relate to. It may appear that the Seventh House involves other people, but in fact, when you engage with the Seventh House through relationship, what you're looking at is a mirror. Your partners in relationship reflect your own issues back to you.

The Seventh House is your partner and your adversary.

The Seventh House is your partner, and also your adversary. But the first thing to remember is that it's the planet that rules the Seventh House that is your actual partner and adversary. The individuals in your life who take on the role of your partner or your adversary play those roles because you are projecting the ruler of your Seventh House on them, and they are reflecting that planet — and its needs and lessons — back to you. You engage with the planet that rules your Seventh House through your one-to-one relationships. But it's always about the planet and never about the person who appears to embody the planet for you.

Your partner is like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. Your partner wants to support you so that you can be happy. Of course, you have two shoulders, and your adversary sits on the other one. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on whether or not you are in right relationship with the planet that rules your Seventh House. The goal is not to heed your partner and ignore your adversary (which is a good thing, because often it's hard to tell them apart). The goal is to make sure that both your partner and your adversary support you effectively. If your adversary creates needless difficulties for you and your partner doesn't engage fully, you won't experience much happiness.

You can engage with your partner and your adversary through your one-to-one relationships. Remember that no matter what the issue appears to be in a relationship, if that person is playing the role of your partner or your adversary, it's really about the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House. When you move into right relationship with that planet and begin to meet those needs, the quality of your one-to-one relationships will improve.

The Seventh House is other people.

Other people do not live inside you. However, other people do function as mirrors that reflect the ruler of your Seventh House back to you. Until you recognize that other people are mirrors, they will appear to embody the needs and qualities of the planet that rules your Seventh House. You project your unresolved issues, judgments, and expectations of the ruler of your Seventh House on other people, and for a while at least, you can pretend that those issues belong to other people and not to you. Eventually, you need to accept the truth that everything you see in other people, including all of the qualities you judge or disapprove of, lives inside you. This can be a lot more fun than it sounds.

When you walk past an actual mirror, you usually take a moment and check your reflection. You want to be certain that you look your best and that (both metaphorically and literally) you don't have spinach in your teeth. What if you did the same thing with other people? When you notice something about someone else's appearance, view it as if you just caught a glimpse of your own reflection. It's probably a distorted reflection, and what you see (and judge) in other people may not be nearly as pronounced in you, but it still exists in you somewhere, and if you notice it in other people, it means that you need to give it some conscious attention in yourself. And if you're wondering what to look for, just remember that it will always have to do with the needs or expression of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mars Rules the Seventh House

Your ego is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your ego.

Your ego is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, your ego is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you embody your "little s" self and the character you play. When you are confident of your identity and don't need to prove yourself to others, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you lack self-confidence, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, other people won't challenge or attack you and you won't have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you're giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive. When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with your partner and your adversary, because you identify personally with your partner and your adversary, and feel the need to protect and defend them. You are only confident in the character you play when you have a scene partner to play with. You define yourself in relationship to your partner and your adversary. And you rely on your interactions with your partner and your adversary to keep you anchored in the character of your "little s" self.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses your ego and your "little s" self to support and encourage you. Notice how they tend to agree with you, to share your perspectives, and to reflect your own desires and motivations back to you. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses your ego and your "little s" self to challenge you. Your adversary will often disagree with you and require you to prove yourself and fight for the things that you think that you want. This helps clarify your desires and your motivations. Use these relationships as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with your ego and your "little s" self. The more confident you are in your character and the less you have to prove, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your ego and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person help you to understand your "little s" self?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person help you to understand your “little s” self?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how your ego is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how your ego is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What is it about your partner and your adversary that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of your partner and your adversary?

Who would you be without your partner and your adversary? How would you know yourself?

Your ego is other people; other people are your ego.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of your ego to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of your “little s” self on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to your ego and how well you are playing the role of your character. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it’s never about the other person; it’s always your own issue. When you are confident of your identity and don’t need to prove yourself to others, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when you are unsure of yourself and have to defend your choices and prove that you are right, other people don’t measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don’t have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn’t reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you’re seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, other people won’t challenge or attack you and you won’t have to defend yourself.

Right Relationship with your ego gives you the experience of Power. You have unlimited self-confidence and you are secure in both the character you are playing in your life and in the quality of the performance that you’re giving. But until you find this balance, you will over-identify with your character and believe that your identity is limited to your physical body. You fear the death of the ego/body, and this means you must always be right because the smallest mistake could result in your destruction. You must remember that the real you is the actor playing your character. No matter what happens to your character, the actor, your authentic Self, will survive.

When you let go of the need to defend your character choices, you will discover it's okay to make mistakes, and that you don't always have to be right. This lesson is especially challenging for you with other people, because you identify personally with other people, and feel the need to protect and defend them. You define your identity and your "little s" self in relationship to other people. You use other people to assert your individuality. When you contrast yourself with other people, it's easy for you to recognize what makes you unique. But your relationships with other people only show you what you are not; you must be able to define who you are as an individual, without comparing yourself to others.

You can learn about your "little s" self and the character you play by engaging with other people. Notice that when you observe other people, you unconsciously judge them, sorting them into categories and boxes and carefully labeling them. You then compare yourself to other people and determine where you are the same and where you are different. You are more interested in where you differ from other people because every time you say, "I'm not that," it narrows the options of what you are, which gives you a boost in confidence. Your ego believes that the way to discover and assert your unique identity is to focus on how different you are from everyone else, but this will only take you so far. If you go through life unable to see yourself reflected in anyone else, you will feel isolated and alone. If you really want to understand the character of your "little s" self, you need to focus more on what you have in common with other people, and then notice the differences in how you experience or express those qualities. Everything you notice in other people lives somewhere in you, and it's your job to find it. This is how you develop confidence in your ability to play the character of your "little s" self.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your ego and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your ego and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express the characters of their "little s" selves in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's "little s" selves reflect your own experience of your "little s" self? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how you notice your ego in other people?

What are the biggest problems other people have with their egos? Do you see where you have those problems with your ego in your life?

What is it about other people that you feel the need to protect and defend the most?

How do you define or describe yourself in terms of other people?

Who would you be without other people? How would you know yourself?

Your anger is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your anger.

Anger is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, anger is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you channel the energy of anger. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you fail to address your anger, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with your partner and your adversary, because you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration in your relationships with your partner and your adversary. The more you try to control your partner and your adversary, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at your partner and your adversary only makes the situation worse. You may also project your anger on your partner and your adversary and let them express your anger for you, so you can avoid any personal responsibility for it. A better strategy is to reclaim your anger and master it so you can take full advantage of the energy of anger in your life.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses anger to support and encourage you. Pay close attention to how this person engages with the energy of anger. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses anger to challenge you. Keep in mind that you may not recognize the energy of anger in these relationships because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed—or you notice those feelings in someone else—you are experiencing the energy of anger. Use your relationships with your partner and your adversary as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with anger. When you use the energy of your anger consciously and creatively, your partner and your adversary will reflect that back to you by handling their own anger with more skill. The more you learn to master your anger, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your anger and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody anger to you?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody anger to you?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how anger is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how anger is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What are some examples of how your partner and your adversary makes you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use your partner and your adversary to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at your partner and your adversary? How does that affect the situation?

Your anger is other people; other people are your anger.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of anger to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of anger on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to anger and how well you use the energy of anger constructively. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you master the energy of anger and use that energy in conscious and constructive ways, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when you struggle with your anger by repressing it, projecting it, or lashing out with it, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you will get what you want when you want it, and the world won't piss you off.

The energy of anger can connect you with an experience of Power, but first, you must separate the experience of anger from the story you have created about it. No matter what the appearance is in your reality, your anger is never about what it appears to be about. When you tap into the energy of anger, you must learn to drop the story and refrain from reacting (which would use force and only make the situation worse). Take a moment and drop every part of the story that is not a part of My Business, and then let go of your expectations. This is the most challenging for you with other people, because you have strong expectations and experience high levels of frustration with other people. The more you try to control other people, the more anger you will experience, and directing the energy of your anger at other people only makes the situation worse. But the real issue is that you project your own anger on other people so that you don't have to be personally responsible for how you experience and express it. You need to reclaim the energy of anger that you give away to other people and master it so you can use it to create happiness in your life.

You can begin to master your anger by engaging with other people. Notice how you judge other people, and especially notice the judgments you have that involve anger. You may not recognize the energy of anger because it won't always reach the level of intensity you associate with the emotion of anger. Anytime you feel impatient, frustrated, defensive, annoyed, or stressed—or notice these feelings in other people—you are experiencing the energy of anger. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about anger live in you somewhere. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with mastering anger. The more skillful other people seem to be with handling their anger, the better you're handling your own anger. And the more you learn to master your anger, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your anger and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your anger and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express anger in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of anger reflect your own experience of anger? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how you notice anger in other people?

What are the biggest problems with anger that you see in other people? Do you see where you have those problems with anger in your life?

What are some examples of how other people make you angry, frustrated, or resentful?

How do you use other people to express your anger?

How do you express your anger at other people? How does that affect the situation?

Mars, the Ruler of your Seventh House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Seventh House shows where you most rely on other people in your life and where you are most likely to give away your power to other individuals. Your partners in relationship have more access to the resources of this house than they should. These resources are vital to healthy partnerships and relationships, but you must be fully responsible for them because they're your resources, not your partners'.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

---

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Mars that explores the house that Mars, the Ruler of your Seventh House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Mars, the Ruler of your Seventh House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Mars as the ruler of your Seventh House, and notice how the house Mars occupies influences your understanding.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the First House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your First House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to be confident of who you think you are, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to channel the energy of anger constructively, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to fix the problems you see in other people, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Second House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Second House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to be confident of who you think you are. You will spend money and use your talents to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will spend money and use your talents to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will spend money and use your talents to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Third House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Third House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fourth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fourth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you be confident of who you think you are, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you channel the energy of anger constructively, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you fix the problems you see in other people, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fifth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fifth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to be confident of who you think you are, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to fix the problems you see in other people, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Sixth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Sixth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to be confident of who you think you are, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to channel the energy of anger constructively, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Seventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Seventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to be confident of who you think you are for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to channel the energy of anger constructively for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to fix the problems you see in other people for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Eighth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eighth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to be confident of who you think you are. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to channel the energy of anger constructively. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Ninth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Ninth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to be confident of who you think you are because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to channel the energy of anger constructively because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to fix the problems you see in other people because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Tenth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Tenth House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to be confident of who you think you are, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to channel the energy of anger constructively, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to fix the problems you see in other people, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Eleventh House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to be confident of who you think you are so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to channel the energy of anger constructively so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to fix the problems you see in other people so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Twelfth House

With Mars, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your ego, your anger, your partner and your adversary, and other people. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to be confident of who you think you are, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to channel the energy of anger constructively, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to fix the problems you see in other people, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.