

Mercury Rules the Seventh House

The Seventh House contains the individuals you relate to. It may appear that the Seventh House involves other people, but in fact, when you engage with the Seventh House through relationship, what you're looking at is a mirror. Your partners in relationship reflect your own issues back to you.

The Seventh House is your partner and your adversary.

The Seventh House is your partner, and also your adversary. But the first thing to remember is that it's the planet that rules the Seventh House that is your actual partner and adversary. The individuals in your life who take on the role of your partner or your adversary play those roles because you are projecting the ruler of your Seventh House on them, and they are reflecting that planet — and its needs and lessons — back to you. You engage with the planet that rules your Seventh House through your one-to-one relationships. But it's always about the planet and never about the person who appears to embody the planet for you.

Your partner is like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. Your partner wants to support you so that you can be happy. Of course, you have two shoulders, and your adversary sits on the other one. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on whether or not you are in right relationship with the planet that rules your Seventh House. The goal is not to heed your partner and ignore your adversary (which is a good thing, because often it's hard to tell them apart). The goal is to make sure that both your partner and your adversary support you effectively. If your adversary creates needless difficulties for you and your partner doesn't engage fully, you won't experience much happiness.

You can engage with your partner and your adversary through your one-to-one relationships. Remember that no matter what the issue appears to be in a relationship, if that person is playing the role of your partner or your adversary, it's really about the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House. When you move into right relationship with that planet and begin to meet those needs, the quality of your one-to-one relationships will improve.

The Seventh House is other people.

Other people do not live inside you. However, other people do function as mirrors that reflect the ruler of your Seventh House back to you. Until you recognize that other people are mirrors, they will appear to embody the needs and qualities of the planet that rules your Seventh House. You project your unresolved issues, judgments, and expectations of the ruler of your Seventh House on other people, and for a while at least, you can pretend that those issues belong to other people and not to you. Eventually, you need to accept the truth that everything you see in other people, including all of the qualities you judge or disapprove of, lives inside you. This can be a lot more fun than it sounds.

When you walk past an actual mirror, you usually take a moment and check your reflection. You want to be certain that you look your best and that (both metaphorically and literally) you don't have spinach in your teeth. What if you did the same thing with other people? When you notice something about someone else's appearance, view it as if you just caught a glimpse of your own reflection. It's probably a distorted reflection, and what you see (and judge) in other people may not be nearly as pronounced in you, but it still exists in you somewhere, and if you notice it in other people, it means that you need to give it some conscious attention in yourself. And if you're wondering what to look for, just remember that it will always have to do with the needs or expression of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mercury Rules the Seventh House

Your story is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your story.

Your story is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, your story is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you embody your story. When you actively search for the deeper meaning of your story and pursue the truth within your reality, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when you accept the appearance of the reality of your "little s" story and fail to look for a deeper meaning, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you focus on your "little s" story, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you won't be bored with the story of your life.

You long to answer the call to your greatness, escape the confines of your "little s" story and become the hero of the "Big S" Story of your life. Your "Big S" Story is engaging, exciting, compelling, and endlessly entertaining, while your "little s" story is tedious and uninspiring. The difference between the two is that your "little s" story is just real, but your "Big S" story is true. Nothing in your "little s" story is about what it appears to be about. Everything in your reality is a metaphor that contains hidden depths of meaning. When you question your story, you can discover the truth that will give your life meaning and purpose. You must begin by questioning the story of your partner and your adversary, because this is the area of your life where you take things at face value and focus on the objective reality rather than the subjective truth. Your story and your expectations may cause you to misinterpret the help and support you receive from the individuals who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. You may view anyone who doesn't help you to get what you want as your enemy, but the truth is that both your partner and your adversary help you to experience what you need to connect to the truth of your "Big S" Story.

You can question the reality of your "little s" story and elevate the truth quotient by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses the truth of your "Big S" Story to support and encourage you. Notice how they invite you to look beyond the surface to find a deeper meaning to your story. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses your story to challenge you. Notice how they may confront you with the appearance of your "little s" story and try to prove that you are limited by that reality. This drives you to break free of your "little s" story and connect with the truth of your "Big S" Story. The more you are willing to drop every part of your story that isn't absolutely true or isn't your business, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your story and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your story and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody your "Big S" Story?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person force you to confront the limits of your “little s” story?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how your story is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how your story is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What is your story about your partner and your adversary? What does it mean to you? What role does it play in your life? How is it a recurring theme or challenge for you?

How does your story about your partner and your adversary limit you and keep you small?

How much of your story about your partner and your adversary is true? What happens to that story when you drop every part of the story that is not part of My Business because it's not your responsibility or you can't actually do anything to change or control it?

Your story is other people; other people are your story.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of your story to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of your story on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to your story and how well you are pursuing the truth of your “Big S” Story. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you actively search for the deeper meaning of your story and pursue the truth within your reality, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when you accept the appearance of the reality of your “little s” story and fail to look for a deeper meaning, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you won't be bored with the story of your life.

You long to answer the call to your greatness, escape the confines of your “little s” story and become the hero of the “Big S” Story of your life. Your “Big S” Story is engaging, exciting, compelling, and endlessly entertaining, while your “little s” story is tedious and uninspiring. The difference between the two is that your “little s” story is just real, but your “Big S” story is true. Nothing in your “little s” story is about what it appears to be about. Everything in your reality is a metaphor that contains hidden depths of meaning. When you question your story, you can discover the truth that will give your life meaning and purpose. You must begin by questioning the story of other people, because this is the area of your life where you take things at face value and focus on the objective reality rather than the subjective truth. You project the limits of your “little s” story on other people and what you notice in them is how small, petty, and powerless they are. You rarely question your perceptions of other people, and you incorporate those perceptions in your own reality, imposing those limits on your own story.

You can question the reality of your “little s” story and elevate the truth quotient by engaging with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve their stories and whether or not their lives have any meaning or purpose. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you’re seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about how small and meaningless their lives are live in you somewhere. These represent the reality of your “little s” story, but not the truth of your “Big S” Story. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with discovering the truth and the deeper meaning of your own story. The more you are willing to drop every part of your story that isn’t absolutely true or isn’t your business, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your story and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your story and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn’t seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people live the “Big S” Story of their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people’s experience of their “Big S” Story reflect your own experience of your “Big S” Story? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how you notice your story in other people?

Generally, how well do other people help you question the reality of your “little s” story and pursue the truth of your “Big S” Story?

What are the biggest problems that you see other people having with their stories? Do you see where you have those problems with your story in your life?

What is your story about other people? What does it mean to you? What role does it play in your life? How is it a recurring theme or challenge for you?

How does your story about other people limit you and keep you small?

How much of your story about other people is true? What happens to that story when you drop every part of the story that is not part of My Business because it’s not your responsibility or you can’t actually do anything to change or control it?

Your understanding and communication are your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your understanding and communication.

Understanding and communication are your partner: they’re like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. They’re always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, Understanding and communication are your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you embody understanding and communication. When you have a personal understanding of truth, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when you do not understand truth and look to other people to validate your perceptions of reality, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn’t do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn’t work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you lack understanding, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don’t support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you will understand everything.

You long for a personal understanding of truth. When you communicate, you look outside of yourself to validate your subjective experience of reality to verify its level of truth. The problem with communication is that so much gets lost in translation. You have to create a context for the words for them to have any meaning. You rely on the context of your partner and your adversary to understand the world. When you communicate, you translate your perceptions into the language of your partner and your adversary. When you receive new information from any source, you filter that information through the lens of your partner and your adversary so that you can understand how it fits in your subjective reality. But you can't assume that other people use the same filters. You can easily communicate with and understand the individuals who play the roles of your partner and your adversary, but you have a harder time connecting to other people who don't speak the same language.

You can deepen your understanding and improve the quality of your communication by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses understanding and communication to support and encourage you. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses understanding and communication to challenge you. Use these relationships as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with understanding and communication. Become aware of the language you speak with these individuals and then notice how other people don't necessarily speak that language. This makes it possible for you to learn other languages so you can improve your communication skills. The more conscious you are of the filters that govern how you understand and communicate, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your understanding and communication and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your understanding and communication and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody understanding and communication to you?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody understanding and communication to you? Where do you not understand or communicate with this person? What can you learn from that?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how understanding and communication are your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how understanding and communication are your adversary and creates challenges for you?

What are some of the ways that you communicate with your partner and your adversary? How well do other people usually understand your message?

How do you use your relationship with partner and your adversary to understand other people? What do you learn about other people by observing how they engage with their partners and their adversaries?

Your understanding and communication are other people; other people are your understanding and communication.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of understanding and communication to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of understanding and communication on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to the truth and how well you are understanding and communicating truth. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you have a personal understanding of the truth, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when you do not understand the truth and look to other people to validate your perceptions of reality, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you will understand everything.

You long for a personal understanding of truth. When you communicate, you look outside of yourself to validate your subjective experience of reality to verify its level of truth. The problem with communication is that so much gets lost in translation. You have to create a context for the words for them to have any meaning. You rely on the context of other people to understand the world. When you communicate, you translate your perceptions into the language of other people. When you receive new information from any source, you filter that information through the lens of other people so that you can understand how it fits in your subjective reality. You always try to see things from other people's perspectives, but one challenge with this is that other people don't speak a single language. You search for a common denominator that will make sense to everyone, but this doesn't help with individual communication.

You can deepen your understanding and improve the quality of your communication by engaging with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve their ability to understand and communicate. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about understanding and communication live in you somewhere. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with mastering understanding and communication. If other people don't seem to understand something, it may be a sign that you don't understand it either. And when other people fail to communicate effectively, you need to consider if your message is as clear as you think it is. When you pay attention to your judgments and perceptions of how other people communicate you can deepen your personal understanding of truth.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

---

What part of the description of your understanding and communication and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your understanding and communication and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express understanding and communication in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of understanding and communication reflect your own experience of understanding and communication? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

---

What are some examples of how you notice understanding and communication in other people?

Generally, how well do other people understand and communicate truth?

What are the biggest problems with understanding and communication that you see in other people? Do you see where you have those problems with understanding and communication in your life?

What are some of the ways that you communicate with other people? How well do other people usually understand your message?

How do you use other people to understand other people? What do you learn about other people by observing how they engage with other people?

Mercury, the Ruler of your Seventh House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Seventh House shows where you most rely on other people in your life and where you are most likely to give away your power to other individuals. Your partners in relationship have more access to the resources of this house than they should. These resources are vital to healthy partnerships and relationships, but you must be fully responsible for them because they're your resources, not your partners'.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Mercury that explores the house that Mercury, the Ruler of your Seventh House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Mercury, the Ruler of your Seventh House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Mercury as the ruler of your Seventh House, and notice how the house Mercury occupies influences your understanding.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the First House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your First House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to make your story more interesting, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to understand and communicate, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to fix the problems you see in other people, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Second House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Second House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to make your story more interesting. You will spend money and use your talents to understand and communicate. You will spend money and use your talents to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will spend money and use your talents to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Third House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Third House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to make your story more interesting, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to understand and communicate, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fourth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fourth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you make your story more interesting, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you understand and communicate, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you fix the problems you see in other people, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fifth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fifth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to make your story more interesting, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to understand and communicate, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to fix the problems you see in other people, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Sixth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Sixth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to make your story more interesting, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to understand and communicate, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Seventh House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Seventh House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to make your story more interesting for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to understand and communicate for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to fix the problems you see in other people for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Eighth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eighth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to make your story more interesting. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to understand and communicate. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Ninth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Ninth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to make your story more interesting because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to understand and communicate because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to fix the problems you see in other people because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Tenth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Tenth House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to make your story more interesting, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to understand and communicate, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to fix the problems you see in other people, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Eleventh House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to make your story more interesting so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to understand and communicate so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to fix the problems you see in other people so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Twelfth House

With Mercury, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your story, your understanding and communication, your partner and your adversary, and other people. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to make your story more interesting, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to understand and communicate, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to fix the problems you see in other people, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.