

Jupiter Rules the Seventh House

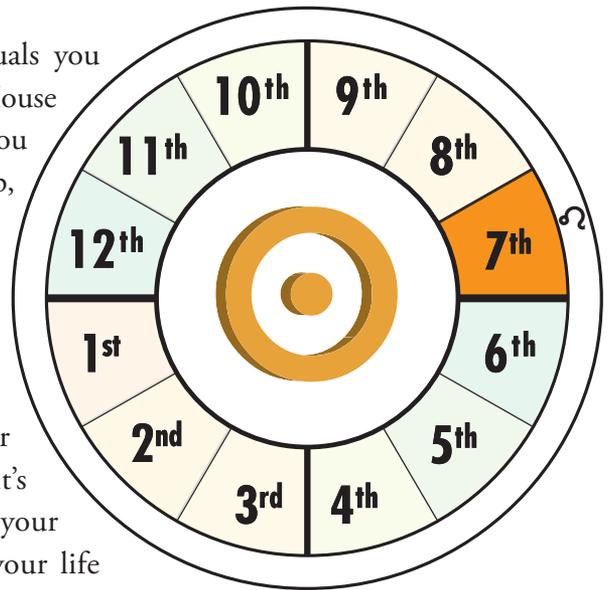

The Seventh House contains the individuals you relate to. It may appear that the Seventh House involves other people, but in fact, when you engage with the Seventh House through relationship, what you're looking at is a mirror. Your partners in relationship reflect your own issues back to you.

The Seventh House is your partner and your adversary.

The Seventh House is your partner, and also your adversary. But the first thing to remember is that it's the planet that rules the Seventh House that is your actual partner and adversary. The individuals in your life who take on the role of your partner or your adversary play those roles because you are projecting the ruler of your Seventh House on them, and they are reflecting that planet — and its needs and lessons — back to you. You engage with the planet that rules your Seventh House through your one-to-one relationships. But it's always about the planet and never about the person who appears to embody the planet for you.

Your partner is like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. Your partner wants to support you so that you can be happy. Of course, you have two shoulders, and your adversary sits on the other one. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on whether or not you are in right relationship with the planet that rules your Seventh House. The goal is not to heed your partner and ignore your adversary (which is a good thing, because often it's hard to tell them apart). The goal is to make sure that both your partner and your adversary support you effectively. If your adversary creates needless difficulties for you and your partner doesn't engage fully, you won't experience much happiness.

You can engage with your partner and your adversary through your one-to-one relationships. Remember that no matter what the issue appears to be in a relationship, if that person is playing the role of your partner or your adversary, it's really about the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House. When you move into right relationship with that planet and begin to meet those needs, the quality of your one-to-one relationships will improve.

The Seventh House is other people.

Other people do not live inside you. However, other people do function as mirrors that reflect the ruler of your Seventh House back to you. Until you recognize that other people are mirrors, they will appear to embody the needs and qualities of the planet that rules your Seventh House. You project your unresolved issues, judgments, and expectations of the ruler of your Seventh House on other people, and for a while at least, you can pretend that those issues belong to other people and not to you. Eventually, you need to accept the truth that everything you see in other people, including all of the qualities you judge or disapprove of, lives inside you. This can be a lot more fun than it sounds.

When you walk past an actual mirror, you usually take a moment and check your reflection. You want to be certain that you look your best and that (both metaphorically and literally) you don't have spinach in your teeth. What if you did the same thing with other people? When you notice something about someone else's appearance, view it as if you just caught a glimpse of your own reflection. It's probably a distorted reflection, and what you see (and judge) in other people may not be nearly as pronounced in you, but it still exists in you somewhere, and if you notice it in other people, it means that you need to give it some conscious attention in yourself. And if you're wondering what to look for, just remember that it will always have to do with the needs or expression of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Jupiter Rules the Seventh House

Your growth is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your growth.

Growth is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, growth is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you fulfill your potential. When you grow and expand in all areas of your life, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But when your growth is uneven and you are too much in some dimensions and not enough in others, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you don't feel like you are growing, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you won't feel limited, stuck, or restricted.

Growth is about fulfilling your potential in every dimension. The only way to track your growth is to compare where you are now to where you were in the past. When you fulfill your current potential, the outer limits of your potential automatically expand, which creates new opportunities so you never feel stuck. If you encounter a boundary and feel limited or constrained by it, this means that you have unexplored potential somewhere else. If you push past the boundary and reach for more before you have made full use of what you have, you will be out of balance. You will be too much in some dimensions and not enough in others. This is especially important with your partner and your adversary. You use your relationships with the individuals who play the roles of your partner and your adversary to measure and track your growth. But if you focus too much on how you compare to other people or measure your growth using someone else's metrics, you will experience challenges and not fulfill your unique potential.

The best way to evaluate your growth and locate your untapped potential is to engage with with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses growth to support and encourage you. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses growth to challenge you. Use these relationships as a barometer to measure your own level of mastery with growth, but make sure you don't measure your own growth against theirs. Instead, let the growth you notice in your partner and your adversary inspire you to discover your untapped potential and to make full use of all of your available resources. The more you experience balanced growth in every dimension, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your growth and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your growth and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody growth and expansion to you?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody growth and expansion to you?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how growth is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how growth is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

How do you measure or evaluate growth with your partner and your adversary? What do you use as a comparative reference?

Where do you feel that you are not enough with your partner and your adversary? What are you basing this on? How will you know when you are enough?

Where do you feel that you are too much with your partner and your adversary? What are you basing this on? What boundary did you cross and who created that boundary?

Your growth is other people; other people are your growth.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of growth to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of growth on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to growth and how well you are fulfilling your potential. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you grow and expand in all areas of your life, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But when your growth is uneven and you are too much in some dimensions and not enough in others, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you won't feel limited, stuck, or restricted.

Growth is about fulfilling your potential in every dimension. The only way to track your growth is to compare where you are now to where you were in the past. When you fulfill your current potential, the outer limits of your potential automatically expand, which creates new opportunities so you never feel stuck. If you encounter a boundary and feel limited or constrained by it, this means that you have unexplored potential somewhere else. If you push past the boundary and reach for more before you have made full use of what you have, you will be out of balance. You will be too much in some dimensions and not enough in others. You rely on other people to evaluate your growth, and this can create challenges for you. It's fine to be inspired by the potential you see in other people, but your growth is personal, and your path is unique. If you measure your progress using other people's standards, you will never get an accurate picture of your growth.

The best way to evaluate your growth and locate your untapped potential is to engage with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve how they are growing and how well they are fulfilling their potential. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about growth and expansion live in you somewhere. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with your own growth and how well you are fulfilling your potential. If you feel like other people are growing faster than you are, this may be a sign that you are not making full use of your available resources. The more you experience balanced growth in every dimension, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your growth and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your growth and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express growth in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of growth reflect your own experience of growth? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how you notice growth in other people?

What are the biggest problems with growth that you see in other people? Do you see where you have those problems with growth in your life?

How do you measure or evaluate growth with other people? What do you use as a comparative reference?

Where do you feel that you are not enough with other people? What are you basing this on? How will you know when you are enough?

Where do you feel that you are too much with other people? What are you basing this on? What boundary did you cross and who created that boundary?

Your faith is your partner and your adversary; your partner and your adversary are your faith.

Faith is your partner: it's like the proverbial angel on your shoulder. It's always with you, whispering advice and encouragement in your ear. At the same time, faith is your adversary, sitting on your other shoulder. Your adversary also supports you, but it supports you by creating challenges and obstacles for you to overcome. The quality of the advice and support you receive from your partner and your adversary depends on how well you embody faith. When you actively build your faith and access it on a regular basis, both your partner and your adversary give you clear, appropriate guidance. On a personal level, you feel supported by the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary in your story. But if you are not willing to test your faith, or even worse, if your faith is all for show and lacks a personal connection, your adversary creates ongoing problems for you, and your partner doesn't do much to help. No matter whose advice you follow, it doesn't work out the way you expect it to. And on a personal level, when you lack faith, this shows up as challenges with your one-to-one relationships. The individuals who play the role of your adversaries begin to feel more like your enemies, and the individuals who you expect to be in your corner don't support you. You want to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because you believe that when the individuals in your life really care about your happiness, you won't have to worry about being betrayed.

Sometimes the truth is just beyond the limits of your reality. You can grasp the idea that the Universe is infinite and all of your needs can easily be met, but you don't see the evidence of that in your life. This is what faith is for. Faith is how you build a bridge between your reality and the truth. Faith begins with an idea or a belief. You invest your energy in the idea so that it becomes real to you, and then you accept it without question. When your faith is built on objective truth, it will always support you. But if your faith lacks a foundation of truth, when you need it most, it will abandon you, leaving you broken and betrayed. You invest your faith in your partner and your adversary. Specifically, you invest your faith in the individuals who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. You expect these individuals to be there to support you, but the more power you give away to these individuals, the greater the chance that your faith will be betrayed.

You can become conscious of your faith by engaging with the individuals in your life who play the roles of your partner and your adversary. Start by identifying an individual who often plays the role of your partner, and consider how this person uses faith to support and encourage you. Notice how you invest your faith in this person, and what, specifically you expect them to do for you. Next, choose someone who shows up in your life as your adversary, and notice how that person uses faith to challenge you. Notice how you invest your faith in this person and what role you expect them to play in your life. Now consider how much power you are giving away to these individuals. If you invest your faith in the idea that you need those individuals to survive, you are setting yourself up for betrayal because that idea is not true. The source of your power lives within you, not in other individuals. The more you invest your faith in the truth, the more your one-to-one relationships will improve.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your faith and your partner and your adversary resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your faith and your partner and your adversary resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

Think of a person who plays the role of your partner and generally supports and encourages you. How does this person embody faith to you?

Think of a person who plays the role of your adversary and who often creates challenges and obstacles for you. How does this person embody faith to you?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how faith is your partner and supports you in your life?

What are some examples of how faith is your adversary and creates challenges for you?

How do you invest your faith in your partner and your adversary? What is it that you take for granted about your partner and your adversary without questioning it?

How has your faith in your partner and your adversary supported you? What are some examples of how that faith was justified?

How has your faith in your partner and your adversary not supported you? What are some examples of how your faith was misplaced and you were betrayed?

Your faith is other people; other people are your faith.

Other people seem to be the embodiment of faith to you, but in fact, you project your own issues, judgments, and expectations of faith on other people, and they reflect those projections back to you. Other people are mirrors that help you to become aware of your own relationship to faith and how well you are building and testing your faith. This can be a difficult lesson to learn because you first need to accept that despite appearances, it's never about the other person; it's always your own issue. When you actively build your faith and access it on a regular basis, you have a favorable impression of other people. You notice their best qualities, and you are attracted to them. But if you are not willing to test your faith, or even worse, if your faith is all for show and lacks a personal connection, other people don't measure up. You notice their flaws and their shortcomings, and you don't have a good impression of them. You especially judge other people based on their appearance, and you reject any new information that doesn't reinforce your first impression. It never occurs to you that you're seeing your own reflection in other people. You want other people to pay more attention to their appearance and address their flaws because you want to like them. You believe that when you find other people attractive, you won't have to worry about being betrayed.

Sometimes the truth is just beyond the limits of your reality. You can grasp the idea that the Universe is infinite and all of your needs can easily be met, but you don't see the evidence of that in your life. This is what faith is for. Faith is how you build a bridge between your reality and the truth. Faith begins with an idea or a belief. You invest your energy in the idea so that it becomes real to you, and then you accept it without question. When your faith is built on objective truth, it will always support you. But if your faith lacks a foundation of truth, when you need it most, it will abandon you, leaving you broken and betrayed. You invest your faith in other people. You follow the crowd with your faith. You assume that there is safety in numbers, and that if you invest your faith where other people have faith, you are less likely to be betrayed. This is not the case, however. Other people often have faith in things that are real but not true.

You can become conscious of your faith by engaging with other people. Begin by noticing how you judge other people, and especially the judgments you have that involve faith. The next step is the hard part: remembering the truth that other people are mirrors, and what you're seeing (and judging) is your own reflection. It may be a distorted reflection, but whatever issues you notice in other people about how they build and test their faith live in you somewhere. When you catch your reflection in other people, you can become conscious of these issues and address them before they cause too much trouble for you. You can use other people as mirrors to track your progress with how you build and test your own faith. If you judge other people for not living their faith, consider how you are living your own faith. And if you're not living your faith, you may need to invest it somewhere else. The more you invest your faith in the truth, the more you will like other people.

LIGHT BULB QUESTIONS

What part of the description of your faith and other people resonated the most with you? Where do you see this in your life? How does it show up for you?

What part of the description of your faith and other people resonated the least with you? What about that description doesn't seem to apply to you and why?

How well do you think other people express faith in their lives? Where and how are they not living up to your expectations?

How does your judgment of other people's experience of faith reflect your own experience of faith? Can you recognize how your judgments of other people apply to you? Why or why not?

PUZZLE QUESTIONS

What are some examples of how you notice faith in other people?

What are the biggest problems that other people seem to have with faith? Do you see where you have those problems with faith in your life?

How do you invest your faith in other people? What is it that you take for granted about other people without questioning it?

How has your faith in other people supported you? What are some examples of how that faith was justified?

How has your faith in other people not supported you? What are some examples of how your faith was misplaced and you were betrayed?

Jupiter, the Ruler of your Seventh House in Houses

The house occupied by the Ruler of the Seventh House shows where you most rely on other people in your life and where you are most likely to give away your power to other individuals. Your partners in relationship have more access to the resources of this house than they should. These resources are vital to healthy partnerships and relationships, but you must be fully responsible for them because they're your resources, not your partners'.

JOURNAL QUESTIONS & INSTRUCTIONS

Begin by reviewing the chapter in the video lesson on Jupiter that explores the house that Jupiter, the Ruler of your Seventh House occupies. Then locate and read the description of the house occupied by Jupiter, the Ruler of your Seventh House. Now, go back and revisit each of the journal questions about how you experience Jupiter as the ruler of your Seventh House, and notice how the house Jupiter occupies influences your understanding.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the First House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your First House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your personality and outer appearance. The resources of the First House include your health, your happiness, your appearance, and your very identity. You will use your personal interests and happiness to grow using your untapped potential, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to build and test your faith, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. You will use your personal interests and happiness to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. And you will use your personal interests and happiness to fix the problems you see in other people, and other people will notice this in your appearance and your personality. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your First House, affecting your avatar, your outer appearance, your happiness, and how much you enjoy your hobbies and interests. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your First House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Second House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Second House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your money and resources. The resources of the Second House include your money, your personal possessions, and the skills and talents you have that can be used to earn money. You will spend money and use your talents to grow using your untapped potential. You will spend money and use your talents to build and test your faith. You will spend money and use your talents to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will spend money and use your talents to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Second House, specifically because they encourage you to spend your money, but they don't necessarily help you to earn more money or connect to the truth of your prosperity. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Second House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Third House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Third House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your comfort zone. The resources of your Third House are all local, close, and familiar. You can communicate to your network to ask for support, but you will only call people you already know and have worked with before. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to grow using your untapped potential, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to build and test your faith, and you rarely consider new options. You rely on your familiar habits and local resources to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely consider new options. And rely on your familiar habits and local resources to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely consider new options. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Third House, creating changes to your comfort zone that make it less familiar and less comfortable, and forcing you to pay attention to your habits and routines. In turn, this may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Third House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fourth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fourth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your private life. The resources of the Fourth House include your private and personal life, your home, real estate, tradition, and family connections. You do not want to be noticed when you grow using your untapped potential, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you build and test your faith, because it's personal and private. You do not want to be noticed when you improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, because it's personal and private. And you do not want to be noticed when you fix the problems you see in other people, because it's personal and private. Your pursuit of privacy may disrupt your Fourth House, shaking the very foundation of your life. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fourth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Fifth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Fifth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your creativity and fun. The resources of the Fifth House include games, gambling, entertainment, art, creativity, and all forms of amusement and recreation. You are willing to take creative risks to grow using your untapped potential, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to build and test your faith, and you expect to have fun in the process. You are willing to take creative risks to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you expect to have fun in the process. And you are willing to take creative risks to fix the problems you see in other people, and you expect to have fun in the process. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Fifth House, especially if you don't feel that you have been creative enough or if you're not having fun. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Fifth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Sixth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Sixth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your job, your workplace environment, and your relationships with co-workers and employees. The resources of the Sixth House include hard work and selfless service. You expect to work hard to grow using your untapped potential, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to build and test your faith, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. You expect to work hard to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. And you expect to work hard to fix the problems you see in other people, and you rarely get recognized or rewarded for it. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Sixth House, especially because you are always looking for ways to lighten the workload, so you may try to hire someone to do the work for you, or failing that, you may create illness so you can call in sick. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Sixth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Seventh House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Seventh House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your one-to-one relationships. The resources of the Seventh House appear to be other individuals because you project everything associated with planets in your Seventh House on other people and you don't recognize that those qualities live in you. You expect other individuals to grow using your untapped potential for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to build and test your faith for you and may blame them if they don't. You expect other individuals to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships for you and may blame them if they don't. And you expect other individuals to fix the problems you see in other people for you and may blame them if they don't. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Seventh House by creating difficulties in your one-to-one relationships. And while the problems will appear to be about other people, they're really your own issues. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Seventh House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Eighth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eighth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your debts and shared resources. The resources of the Eighth house are other people's money, values, and opinions. This money is available to you in the form of loans, investments, or simply credit card debt. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to grow using your untapped potential. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to build and test your faith. You will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships. And you will collaborate, use shared resources, ask for favors, or use other people's money to fix the problems you see in other people. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eighth House because they will increase your awareness of your debt, both personal (what you owe other people) and financial (the money you owe to others). This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eighth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the in the Ninth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Ninth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your danger zone. The resources of the Ninth House are all foreign, distant, new, unfamiliar, and unknown to you. They include experts and authorities that can offer wisdom and knowledge, such as teachers, religious leaders, lawyers, and doctors. You always require new information to grow using your untapped potential because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to build and test your faith because what you already know is not sufficient. You always require new information to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships because what you already know is not sufficient. And you always require new information to fix the problems you see in other people because what you already know is not sufficient. These behaviors may cause disruption to your Ninth House because the new information you acquire may challenge and alter your beliefs. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Ninth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Tenth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Tenth House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your public and professional image. The resources of the Tenth House include your reputation, your public image, and the passwords to all of your social media accounts. You want to be famous for your ability to grow using your untapped potential, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to build and test your faith, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. You want to be famous for your ability to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. And you want to be famous for your ability to fix the problems you see in other people, so you broadcast it to the world and share it on social media. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Tenth House and affect both your personal and your professional reputation. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Tenth House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Eleventh House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Eleventh House, you encounter your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people in your ambitions and aspirations. The resources of the Eleventh House are your benefactors: friends, colleagues, and teammates who are in a position to support you and help you to acquire the things you believe will make you happy. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to grow using your untapped potential so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to build and test your faith so you can acquire happiness. You depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships so you can acquire happiness. And you depend on the support and encouragement of your friends and benefactors to fix the problems you see in other people so you can acquire happiness. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Eleventh House and affect not only your ambitions and aspirations, but also the level of support you receive from your friends and benefactors. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Eleventh House.

Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in the Twelfth House

With Jupiter, the Ruler of the Seventh House in your Twelfth House you are unconscious of your growth, your faith, your partner and your adversary, and other people. The Twelfth House is above the horizon, so everything about planets in the Twelfth House is visible to others, but it's all in your blind spot, so you're the last to know about it. The resources of the Twelfth House include your hidden motivations, your unconscious programming, your shadow self, and your personal demons. You are not conscious of what motivates you to grow using your untapped potential, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to build and test your faith, and it will have unexpected consequences. You are not conscious of what motivates you to improve the quality of your one-to-one relationships, and it will have unexpected consequences. And you are not conscious of what motivates you to fix the problems you see in other people, and it will have unexpected consequences. These behaviors may cause disruptions to your Twelfth House, causing resentment and creating hidden enemies. This may affect your ability to meet the needs of the planet that rules your Twelfth House.